FLAMES RACE THROUGH TIMBER

THREATENS 3 VILLAGES

Blaze Fed By Dry Leaves, Underbrush, Seasoned Cordwood and Driven By Fifty-Mile Gale Heads Straight For Small Towns

CROSSES LARGE TRACT WITH AMAZING SPEED

Hundreds of Men Fighting Fire Unable to Check Its Onward Rush and Call Is Sent to Nearest Large Cities for Assistance.

(United Press.)

CAPE MAY, N. J., Nov. 25.—Raging forest fires are sweeping through Cape May county tonight, threatening to wipe out Kinsevtown, Rio Grande and Fishing Creek, three small villages directly in the path of the flames.

A fifty-mile wind drove the blaze onward. Timber, dry leaves, underbrush, seasoned cordwood and dead timber fed the flames that have already crossed four square miles of timberland with amazing speed.

Hundreds of volunteers were unable to check the fire and appeals for assistance and apparatus were sent to Wildwood, Cape May and other towns along the south Jersey shore.

The fires first assumed serious proportions yesterday when Kinseytown was threatened with destruction. Flames swept within a hundred yards of the little village and it appeared certain the place would be wiped out. Crackling flames were almost licking the houses on the outskirts of the town when a chemical spray and a change in the wind turned the blaze. The fire then was believed under control.

High winds late today whipped up sparks and the fire again raged. Dense smoke hindered the men from reaching the center of the fire. Flames tonight leaped high and illuminated the sky. Careless handling of matches by hunters is believed to have started the fire and an effort will be made to prevent more guners from going into the until after a rain.

Says "Remember, I Die for Ireland"

LONDON, Nov. 25.—"Remember, I die for Ireland," were the last words of Erkine Childers, before being shot to death by a Free State firing squad, says a Dublin dispatch. Childers, to the last, did not believe that the death sentence would be carried out, but when he realized his fate, he gave way to uncontrollable grief. Childers believed that the Irish would sweep away any government that dared to lay hands on him.

Blind Man Robbed By Meanest Thief

(Special to The Star.)

FALLS CITY, Neb., Nov. 25.—The meanest man in Richardson county last night robbed James Malone, blind confectioner and cigar dealer of Salem, of sixty dollars in cash, while the latter was at supper.

Malone has always made a habit of locking his store during meals, having no other help in the place. This was the second time Malone's store had been burglarized in the past three weeks.

Malone has lived here for more than forty years. He lost both eyes in a stone quarry some years ago and since then has depended upon his little store for his livelihood.

INJURED IN MINE

Thirteen Miners In Pit Of Coal Company's Workings Badly Hurt When Keg Of Powder Explodes — Four Men May Not Recover.

CHEROKEE, Kan., Nov. 25.—Thirteen miners, four of whom are probably fatally injured, were in Pittsburgh and Girard hospitals tonight as the result of injuries sustained today when a powder explosion in the pit of the No. 6 mine of the Hamilton Coal & Coke company here occurred.

Four of the injured men are seriously burned and recovery of these is doubted by hospital attendants. The explosion occurred when a miner working 8,000 feet from the entrance of a 170-foot level, accidentally dropped a keg of powder on a storage battery. The powder exploded and hurled miners in all directions, burying fifteen men beneath the wreckage.

The force of the explosion was felt throughout the mine and shook this place to its foundations.

Forty-eight miners were in the shaft at the time of the explosion.

First reports were to the effect that a "dust" explosion had entombed twelve men and rescue crews were rushed from surrounding towns. The mine is only slightly damaged, according to officials.

SINGER'S SISTER WILL TELL STORY

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 25—The testimony by which Deputy Attorney General Wilbur Mott intends to obtain indictment of a woman and two men in the Hall-Mills murders will be presented to the grand jury on Monday.

The three sisters of the slain choir singer, in whom she confided her affair with Rev. Edward W. Hall, are expected to testify that Mrs. Hall knew of her husband's relations with Mrs. Mills as early as last February.

The rector's widow, who has been eager to appear before the jurors and tell her story, will not be called unless the jurors themselves ask for her appearance, Mott said. It is not expected that the panel will summon her.

Mrs. Augusta Tennyson, pretty blonde sister of the singer she much resembles, who has remained in the background since the murders became of national interest came suddenly to the front tonight and announced that she would reveal an entirely new angle of the case to the jury Monday.

"At first I did not want to talk," she said, "because of my husband and baby, but because of the way things are coming out now, I think I should. I am going to see this thing through. I'll give evidence Monday that will show Mrs. Hall knew of the affair.

"My sister came to me many times and told me about her affair with Dr. Hall."

Another sister, Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt of Paterson, N. J., already had told the authorities Mrs. Mills confessed to her the love she had for the rector.

Bollen Discounts Report Ford's Name To Be On Ballot

A report carried in Omaha newspapers that F. L. Bollen of Lincoln would shortly file the name of Henry Ford as a presidental candidate on the democratic ticket was without foundation, Mr. Bollen said Saturday night.

"It was only a joke," Mr. Bollen said.

The same report said that Mr. Ford's would be placed on the republican ticket by George Kline.

Determined Effort To Free Bergdoll

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Nov. 25.—Freedom of Edwin Bergdoll, wealthy Philadelphia draft dodger, now serving a term of imprisonment in Leavenworth penitentiary for desertion, apparently hinged tonight on whether former President Woodrow Wilson issued a proclamation following the armistice limiting the term of army deserters' imprisonment to eighteen months.

On the contention that such a proclamation was issued and that Bergdoll having served that term is entitled to his liberty, attorneys for the draft evader are basing their plea in habeas corpus proceedings now before the federal court.

SENATORS JUMP TO DEFENSE OF HUSKER'S SOLON

Resent Tiger's Charge "German Prooaganda" Inspired Hitchcock's Assault.

Laugh at Idea of Nebraskan Being Pro-German and Cite Election Returns.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—To the stringing accusation of Georges Clemenceau that "German propaganda" inspired the bitter denunciation by Senator Hitchcock, democrat of Nebraska, of the use of "black troops" by the French on the Rhine, a number of senators were prepared tonight to make caustic response in the senate on Monday.

Senator Hitchcock's friends laughed at the idea that he could be rated pro-German. They recalled that the solid German-American vote of Nebraska was cast against him as the recent election and was largely responsible for his defeat for re-election.

Hitchcock was digging deep into official records for additional data regarding the alleged outrages committed on the German people of the Rhineland by French "black troops," and he promised to make some sensational disclosures when he again replied to the firey former French premier on the senate floor.

From his files, Hitchcock dug a letter written in German by Dr. Edmund Von Mach, a former Harvard professor and a notable spokesman for the German element in this country, in which he was bitterly attacked for leading the unsuccessful fight for ratification of the Versailles treaty by the senate.

Von Mach ridiculed Hitchcock's action in first condemning the "black shame" of Franch in the senate on August 31 last and demanding then the withdrawal of "uncivilized soldiers from the French area of occupation on the Rhine."

Negative In Campaign.

"Hitchcock has been negative in his campaign against the horror on the Rhine up to the approach of his election, Von Mach wrote. "He had known the definite facts for a long time, even when Woodrow Wilson was still president....Personally I have no reason to call Hitchcock among our friends....When Hitchcock became a 'behinder' of the Wilson administration, he surrendered the right to be respected as a free man. He hung up on a nail his head, heart and conscience and did the dirty work for Wilson."

Hitchcock, instead of relying on "German propaganda" was declared to be ready to present documentary evidence from the archives of the state department to support his charges that negro soldiers were quartered by the French government on the German people.

But from the Congressional Record several democratic senators still closely associated with former President Wilson dug a statement inserted in it by Hitchcock on August 31, last, to support contention which they are prepared to make in the senate that he did get some of his information from German sources.

"Something more than a year ago, I received copy a printed circular which I hold in my hand, describing in some detail what was called the 'horror on the Rhine.' It purported to be the complaint of German people living in the German territory occupied by French troops. These German people protested against the conduct of France in keeping thousands of black soldiers from her African provinces quartered among the people. It charged that the black African troops of France, whether negroes or Senegalese, were committing unspeakable crimes against German women and children.

"The statement was signed by a number of German associations and societies located in other parts of Germany. They appealed to the civilized world to bring influence to bear to induce France to withdraw her black troops and substitute French soldiers."

Refuses to Discuss Report Is Engaged To Cinema Actress

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 25.—Charlie Chaplain admitted tonight that his impersonal preference is for foreign women. This is not to be construed to have connection with rumors relating to himself and Mlle. Pola Negri, who he conceded to be one of the most delightful of foreign women. American women lack personality, and associate too little with men, Chaplain said. Neither Chaplain or Mlle. Negri would discuss the rumor that they are engaged to be married.

Tram Collision In Quake City Hurts Fifteen

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—Fifteen persons were injured, four probably fatally when a one-man trolley crashed into the end of a Catherine street car here tonight. Police reserves were rushed to the scene of the accident and spirited the car crews away from an angry mob that gathered after the collision.

The cause of the accident is unknown.

MATSON SUGGESTS PROGRAM TO CURB RECKLESS DRIVERS

County Attorney Writes Auto Club President Vigilance Committee Could Help.

Proposes Bond or Insurance For Every Motor Vehicle—Would Have Legislature.

Each and every motor vehicle in Nebraska should be bonded or insurance carried for the protection of those who are damaged by reckless and careless driving. Each and every driver of a motor vehicle should be required to carry a license and driving with out such should be penalized. Impounding of automobiles for violations of the law by drivers and in the event of frequent and continued violation the state should confiscate the automobile.

There are suggested by County Attorney Charles E. Matson as a means of saving life and preventing thousands of dollars of damage due to careless and reckless driving of automobiles. The suggestions were contained in a letter to Fred W. Putney, president of the Lincoln Automobile club, in reply to queries as to what the club could do to assist in decreasing automobile accidents. Mr. Matson appealed to the club to assist in creating public opinion that will cause the enactment of additional legislature along the line he suggested.

The Detailed Letter.

His letter follows:

Nov. 25, 1922.

"Fred W. Putney, president Lincoln Automobile Club.

"Dear Sir: Replying to your queries as to what more your club can do to assist in decreasing the accidents of automobiles permit me to suggest the following:

1. Have the members of your club set an example of safe and sane driving and compliance with all motor vehicle legislation, present and future; have your club the center for distribution of sentiment for enforcement of all motor vehicle laws. No law is stronger than public opinion. No law can be enforced that does not have public opinion back of it. It is discouraging to law enforcement officers to bring prosecutions which fail because jurymen, who represent public opinion, will not vote verdicts of guilty or undisputable evidence. Yet, this is exactly what happens in our attempts to enforce the statutes relative to reckless driving. Since I have been county attorney I have prosecuted three defendants for manslaughter because of deaths resulting from violations of the law in the driving of automobiles. One defendant was acquitted, and in the other two cases juries disagreed. If we are to have the law enforced we must have a public opinion which stands for enforcement of the law and your club can do much to build up and maintain this public opinion.

Committee Might Help.

2. It is a sad commentary on our social organization that human life is cheaper than property. Every month we send men to the penitentiary from this county for the theft of automobiles but juryman do not want to

Resume Hearing On Mandamus Writ in Hotel Case Monday

Hearing upon the application of Henry Furrer for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel the board of directors of the Nebraska Building & Investment company to call a stockholders' meeting for the purpose of electing a new board of directors will be resumed Monday, following a partial hearing Friday and Saturday afternoons. George H. Walters, one of the directors, testified Saturday afternoon that his service as a director was an annoyance to him, that he was indifferent to whether he remained a director and that he had not received a cent for acting as a director. Mr. Walters further testified it was the desire of the present board that he remain upon the board and declared a stockholders meeting would not be called by the board until compelled to.

Man Arrested in Minneapolis On Lincoln Charge

Floyd Bartholomew, alias James Hayes, charged with a statutory offense upon a Lincoln girl, is under arrest in Minneapolis, Minn., according to a telegram received Saturday by County Attorney C. E. Matson from the chief of detectives at Minneapolis. Bartholomew will resist requisition, the county attorney said. Constable Ira L. Vorheis will obtain requisition papers from Governor McKelvie Monday and go to Minnesota for Bartholomew, it was stated.

Mathews Appeal Set For Dec. 8

Among the eight or ten criminal cases set for hearing at the next sitting of the supreme court is that of Willard V. Mathews, former president of the Pioneer State bank and the Guaranty Securities Co., of Omaha, serving one to ten years in the penitentiary for embezzlement of $200,000. It will be heard on Friday, December 8.

On December 7, the high court will listen to argument in the case of Perry Anthony, convicted in Lancaster county for selling stock in a Lincoln corporation by means of alleged froudulent representations.

EXPECTING REAL SHOW

Political Wiseacres Believe McKelvie's Appointment of Johnson to Salaried Job Will Rouse Incoming Governor.

LEGALITY OF ACTION BY COMMISSION QUESTIONED

No Provision Made For Paid Secretary — It Is Thought Bryan Will Expect His New State Engineer to Do Some Work.

There is likely to be strong competition for the right to take moving pictures of things which are expected to happen around the seat of Nebraska's state government when Governor-elect C. W. Bryan goes into office and Public Works Secretary George Johnson of the present code cabinet undertakes to function as the $5,000-a-year paid secretary to the capitol commission.

Some of the old timers predict the fur will begin to fly just as soon as the new governor takes charge. If the fur doesn't start right off the bat, they say it won't be long delayed. And they are planning to be on hand for the show when the curtain goes up.

Having been elected on a pledge to repeal the code law, eliminate unnecessary offices, and reduce state expenditures and taxes it is generally believed that Governor-elect Bryan will not warm up to the idea of starting out with a newly-created official on his hands, selected for him by the preceding administration, at an added anual cost of $5,000 for his salary.

Would Displace Own Appointee.

The fact that the capitol commission has got along thus far without employing a paid secretary — the duties being performed by State Engineer Johnson as an ex-officio member—and that his retention after January 1 as a salaried officer would virtually displace the new state engineer to be appointed by the incoming governor are considered additional reasons why Johnson will not be willing to have John to hold the position.

Mr. Bryan, as his friends believe, intends to be more than a mere figurehead as chairman of the capitol commission. Being responsible to the people of the state, he will not they say, feel content to sit back and let a holdover member of the McKelvie code cabinet, acting in the new role of secretary to the commission direct the work. That is why they look for an eruption in the vicinity of the state house soon after Mr. Bryan is inaugurated as governor.

Appointment May Not Be Legal.

The state capitol commission's action in making Johnson its "permanent secretary" is questioned on legal grounds, as well as on those of propriety advisability and the need of official harmony. This was done by the commission at a meeting held in Architect Goodhue's office at New York last December.

As a general rule of law no state officer possesses any authority outside the borders of his own state. The governor of Nebraska is prohibited by the constitution from exercising any gubernatorial powers when he is absent from the state. During his absence "his powers, duties and emoluments of office" devolve upon the lieutenant governor.

ASKS 9 MILLION FOR DRY AGENTS

Congress Will Be Urged to Allow Large Sum to Battle Bootleggers.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Nine and a half million dollars will be asked by he federal prohibition department for next year's battle with bootleggers, under plans being discussed by dry chiefs tonight.

Congress will be asked to appropriate this sum for the coming fiscal year, in order that a new enforcement system may engage the rum running forces President Harding believes have gained such headway as to create a "serious situation."

A shakeup of the system, involving several hundred field agents and some state directors and other officials, is under way to meet the president's objection that the present regime has permitted increases prohibition violations.

Attorney General Daugherty tonight joined the movement for stricter enforcement than the administration decided on at a meeting of the cabinet Friday. He announced that a system of conferences between federal and state attorneys had been arranged so that closer co-operation between the two groups might be obtained. The conferences also will handle violations which might come under the Dyer automobile theft law, the narcotic act and the postal fraude law.

In the prohibition department shakeup, more than fifty agents already have been dropped in New York, eight in New Jersey and others in Chicago. Other changes soon will be made in other cities.

BAKER DENIES THEFT CHARGE

Man Brought Back From Kansas City Pleads Not Guilty.

Says He Knows Nothing About Alleged Robbery in April, 1919.

O. L. Baker, former Lincoln resident, who was arrested in Kansas City last Thursday night in connection with an alleged theft in Lincoln, April 17, 1919, was brought to Lincoln late Saturday afternoon by Constable Ira L. Vorheis. Baker was arraigned before Justice of the Peace W. T. Stevens and pleaded not guilty to a charge of stealing $50 in cash and an $8 gold watch from Andrew Ryherd, Jr., and $365 more from Ryherd, which belonged to his father. Baker failed to furnish $2,000 appearance bond and was taken to the city jail. His preliminary hearing was set for Monday morning before Justice Stevens.

Baker was an exhibitor at the American Royal Livestock show in Kansas City when he was arrested at the instance of Ryherd and his brother, who claimed Baker is the man who represented himself as a federal officer and entered their room in Lincoln in 1919 and took $500 from them. Tow weeks after the robbery, according to the Ryherd brothers, they saw Baker on the streets here but he broke away from them when accosted and escaped.

Baker, when interviewed at the city jail, admitted two young men had accosted him on the streets here about three years ago and accused him of stealing their money. Baker was able to get away from the pair and told them to call at his place of business in Lincoln the next day, he declared. This they failed to do and he did not see them from that time until his arrest in Kansas City. Baker said Baker is not positive that the two men who stopped him on the streets in Lincoln are the same who caused his arrest, he asserted. Further than the incident in Lincoln Baker denied all knowledge of the alleged robbery.

TELEGRAPHERS DO NOT LIKE RULINGS

Speakers at Meeting Here Dwell Upon Labor Board's Recent Decisions.

Rulings of the United States labor board relative to telegraphers' working hours were discussed Saturday evening at a meeting of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers at the Lincoln hotel. W. T. Brown of Chicago, vice president of the international organization, told of the new rulings, which he said increased the working day of the men in the smaller stations from eight hours to twelve and virtually repealed the eight hour regulation in favor of a nine hour shift. W. T. Denton of Lincoln, general chairman of the Burlington division of telegraphers, J. H. Rogers, of LaCrosse, Wis., general secretary and treasurer of the Burlington division, and W. F. Kay, of Chicago, general chairman of the Rock Island division organization told more of the rulings and of alleged injustice to the men. These new rulings take away the rights which the men have enjoyed for the past twenty years, and force them to work as many hours as in the past before the new reforms were initiated, it was said.

D. N. Syford, who has been a telegrapher since 1864, told of the conditions in the old days and gave a few reminiscences of his work. He worked with Thomas Edison in St. Louis at the time he invented his famous "quad," his first valuable invention. G. E. Plotts, local chairman of the organization, presided.

The engineer and fireman were scalded and cut. The mail clerk incurred cuts and brüises.

The locomotive and mail car after jumping the track, turned partly over, crashing against a telephone pole. A suddenly developed defect in the rail is believed to have caused the derailment.

WINDY CITY POLICE CHIEF TO STEP OUT

Fitzmorris Under Fire and Will Resign, According to Rumor in Chicago.

Declared Decision to Quit Reached Following Attack On Mayor Thompson.

(Copyright 1922 by the United Press)

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Resignation Chicago police as a result of attack upon the alleged lack of enforcement of gambling laws by the Thompson administration, was reported tonight in high city administration circles.

The attack on Mayor William Hale Thompson came into the open Friday night following a ceremonial at the Shrine temple attended by the mayor.

When Mayor Thompson attempted to answer claims that other organizations and churches were allowed to sell lottery tickets and raise money at bazars through games of chance although the carnivals supported by Masonic lodges were not, he was hooted down. The mayor twice took the floor and tried to deny the charges, made by Illustrious Potentate Wade, and the 4,000 fellow Shriners hooted him down and refused to hear him on each occasion.

Does Not Deny Report.

Chief Fitzmorris, who has just completed his second year of administration of the police department of Chicago refused to deny the reports tonight.

"I have always said that I would never discuss my resignation," he stated. "When I am ready to step out I will announce it."

The chief on previous occasions when his resignation was reported, issued indignant denials.

According to information obtained from high administration sources, the chief's resignation will be presented to the city council probably a week from Monday. These reports stated he had accepted an executive position with a large firm carrying a salary of $100,000 a year.

Appointment of Fitzmorris to the position of superintendent of police has always drawn fire against Thompson in political circles. Fitzmorris, a democrat, was previously the mayor's secretary. He started as a newsbay and later was a reporter.

Was Called "Boy Chief."

He was given the position after appointees from the ranks of police officers failed to bring the desired results. He was only 33 when appointed and was termed the "boy chief."

His administration of affairs of the department has won the approval of Uncle the Chicago crime commission and the respect of police officers throughout the nation.

While petty gambling and sale of liquor has been carried on fairly openly, records show a sharp drop in the number of robberies, murders and other major crimes. A large proportion of law violators have also been convicted than under previous administrations, the crime commission's reports show.

MAY PASS TRAFFIC MEASURE MONDAY

City Councilmen Believed to Favor Ordinance as Redrafted.

The city commission will give serious consideration to the new traffic ordinance Monday at the regular session and may be asked at that time to pass, amend or disapprove of the measure. Apparently, after the several suggestions have been incorporated into the measure, it is scheduled for passage. It has undergone a third redrafting within the last week and is now in the best shape it will be possible to put it in, according to those interested.

The accompanying resolution fixing a parking time limit in the business district will probably be presented at the same time. It will be an experimental measure which can be changed or amended without difficulty as the needs of the city indicate.

Mayor Zehrung, who left the city Saturday for a week end at Nebraska City, did not expect to have his proposal for a wheel tax in shape for presentation at the Monday meeting. The idea is being allowed to soak into the public's mind hoping that when the ordinance is ready the majority of automobile owners will have agreed that a wheel tax is the most practical way to provide for the additional policing made necessary by the new traffic ordinance.

Few other matters of importance will be before the commission for consideration. The city's part in the attempt to block stock dividend of the Lincoln Traction company now in the hands of the city attorney and will not be officially before the council Monday. The contractors are cleaning up on the last improvement districts that will be worked on this season.

LION GROWLS AT "TIGER'S" SNARL

Great Britain Brands Untrue Reported Statement Regarding German Fleet.

Denies That Authorities Willfully Allowed 1919 Sinking at Scapa Flow.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Great Britain today joined the United States senate in attacking statements made by Georges Clemenceau in his speech-making tour of the United States.

Acting upon authorization from the foreign office in London, the British embassy here issued a statement declaring untrue the former French premier's reported statement that the British allowed the German cruisers to sink their fleet in Scapa Flow in 1919.

"M. Clemenceau is reported as having stated in a speech made by him on November 21 at the Metropolitan Opera house New York, that Great Britain let it (the German fleet) go to the bottom of Scapa Flow and thus secured her guarantee," the statement said.

"The British embassy is authorized to declare that any suggestion that the British government wilfully allowed the German fleet to be sunk at Scapa Flow is not only untrue, but without any possible foundation in fact. By the terms of the armistice, in the negotiations for which France was one of the principals, the British authorities were not permitted to place any guard on the German vessels and they were therefore unable to take any measures to prevent the German crews opening the sea cocks. The The British authorities' powers were confined to ensuring that the fleet did not steam out to sea or open fire. A statement in the above terms was issued by the British government on June 21, 1919, a few hours after the German fleet had been sunk."

Knew Wife Well Enough to Know What She'd Do

(United Press.)

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 25.—This is about a western Nebraska farmer who brought his wife to Denver on their honeymoon ten years age and who lost her temporarily because of her irresistable longing to come back to the scenes of the first few weeks of their married life.

The farmer walked into the tourist bureau here today which he and his young bride visited on their other trip here.

"I've lost my wife," he explained, "and I came to you for help. If one of you young ladies will walk down the street with me I feel certain we'll find her, for she's a jealous woman and if she's in Denver and sees me with a girl she'll make herself known."

A girl employed by a detective agency was called and walked with the farmer down Seventeenth street.

Late today the farmer returned to the bureau.

"She was here all right—and saw me with the girl. Ran across the street slapped my face and told me not to be an old fool. Said she hadn't deserted me but just wanted to visit our honeymoon scenes.

"That's where we're going."

Busy Court Session. — Monday promises to be a record day for the Lincoln police curt Speeders were numerous on Saturday and a long list of names of those who would probably be asked to pay fines for a too rapid pace about Lincoln streets was in the hands of the police Saturday night. Friday speeders, also numerous and the usual promise for a large number on Sunday, swelled the prospective total to a new high figure, partly on account of Judge Whitmore's absence from the city Saturday and the consequent postponement of police court. In the meantime the chiefs orders to arrest all drivers going faster than twenty miles an hour was beginning to have effect and police reported less reckless driving Saturday than early in the week.

THINK ROBBERY MOTIVE.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 25—A woman did not kill "Handsome Joe" Lanus, millionaire Chicago automobile dealer, Mabel Grey, Bromely, Ky., beauty mentioned as his fiance, declared tonight.

"Joe probably was killed by a man who wanted his jewels and money I believe the chamois glove found by his side was put there by the man who killed him to make it look like a woman's work," Miss Gray said.

She denied being engaged to Lanus, describing him as "an old friend of my family."

She said she and Lanus had an understanding that they were to be "just friends."

She said she had been with Lanus on one occasion when he was robbed by highwaymen. "He wore large diamonds," Miss Gray said, "and of course holdup men singled him out I think robbery was the motive behind his murder."

ENGLAND SPENT HUGE SUMS HERE

Figures Show That Great Britain Paid Out More Than She Borrowed.

Money Loaned British By the United States All Spent In This Country.

The Bankers Trust company, of New York, has obtained through its English information service, authentic figures, giving in detail the expenditures made in the United States by the British government during the period in which loans were made to Great Britain by the United States government.

In brief, the figures show that while the total cash advances of the United States to Great Britain has amounted $4,277,000,000. The British government expended in the United States during the same time the sum of $7,220,000,000. That was $2,943,000,000 more than the total sum lent to Great Britain.

The items upon which these British expenditures were made in the United States were as follows (April, 1917 to November, 1920).

Purchases of munitions (including horses, etc.) $1,506,000,000.

Cotton purchased, cereals purchased (to July, 1917) and bills of exchange bought to meet expenditures in U. S. $1,583,000,000.

Payments for cereals after July, 1917, $1,077,000,000.

Purchases of other foods $1,168,000,000.

Tobacco purchased $99,000,000.

Paid for other supplies $215,000,000.

Payments for shipping, $49,000,000.

Interest paid to the U. S. treasury $388,000,000.

Repayment of loans raised in the U. S. $358,000,000.

Purchase of silver $262,000,000.

Paid in miscellaneous ways $91,000,000.

Total—$7,220,000,000.

A number of the above purchases (notably cereals, sugar and munitions) were made by the British government for other allied governments and those governments subsequently repaid Great Britain $1,554,000,000. However, after deducting those repayments, the net expenditures by Great Britain in the United States for British purposes were $5,266,000,000, or above $1,000,000,000 more than was lent to the British government by the United States.

The above expenditures were provided for as follows (April, 1917 to November, 1920):

Loans by U. S. treasury (not after deducting repayments) $4,227,000,000.

Dollars paid by U. S. government to British government for sterling required to make payments in England, $449,000,000.

Dollars paid to British government for rupees and gold from India sold to U. S. treasury $1,000,000.

Money raised by the British government from other sources $639,000,000.

Total—$5,266,000,000.

The final item includes any payments to Great Britain for services rendered such as transportation of troops, etc., which the United States made in dollars in America, together with such sums as the British government amassed from interest on or sales of American securities owned by it, shipments of gold and other exports, and so forth.

LINDERMAN GETS VERDICTS OF $1

Sought $25,000 In Two Suits Against His Mother-in-Law.

The jury in the trial before District Judge E. J. Clements of Charles D. Linderman's $15,000 alienation suit against his mother-in-law, Mrs. Alice Burchholder, returned a verdict in favor of Mr. Linderman for $1. The plaintiff married the defendant's daughter, Norma Cameron, December 24, last. The couple lived at the home of Mrs. Burchholder up to February when Linderman alleges he was ordered from the premises by his mother-in-law.

Linderman brought another suit for $10,... against Mrs. Burchholder a few months ago for alleged false imprisonment and the jury in the trial of that suit also awarded Mr. Linderman a verdict for $1.

Mr. Linderman also has a suit pending against his wife for divorce. In this last suit Mrs. Linderman has filed a cross-petition, asking that a decree be awarded to her instead of to her husband.

SCHOOL SAVINGS PLAN SPREADING

New York, Pittsburgh and Other Cities Report Great Gains In Schools.

Teaching the School Child to Save Is Fundamental Business Training.

Pupils in the public and private schools are depositing their savings through school banks with more enthusiasm and in larger amounts than ever before, according to information reaching the savings bank division of the American Bankers association.

"In view of the trend of the times it is very evident that in cities or schools where the pupils are not becoming regular savers, or where total deposits do not steadily increase, there is a distinct lack of appreciation of the essential importance of inculcating habits of childhood thrift," declared Leo Day Woodworth, deputy manager of the association. "It is important that the school savings system shall become thoroughly established in the grades and through high school so that graduates will have the benefit of the drill in good savings habits all through their school days from the primary to entry into college or business."

In one of the New York City systems, he pointed out the number of school accounts jumped from 11,753 in October 1921 to 19,159 in October this year, although the number of schools was increased only from 17 to 24. The receipts per month increased from $4,... to $15,000 and the balance of deposit increased from $11,... to $117,000. The number of regular savings accounts opened by pupils during October was 153 in 1921 and 541 this year.

The Pittsburg system, which was installed about a year ago, now reports net savings on deposit of about $500,000 belonging to 75,000 of the 81,000 pupils in the 140 Pittsburgh schools. Collections during six weeks amounted to $115,000, with withdrawals of only $24,000. Three of these schools announce that all the pupils in them have savings accounts in the bank.

"However, the wonderful record of Pittsburgh during the past year," Mr. Woodworth said, "may be eclipsed by Providence and nearby cities and towns which, after only four days on which deposits were made in 194 schools, report nearly 53,000 participants in a total enrollment of 61,000 pupils, with a gross deposit of $98,000, and total withdrawals of only $207, nine schools participation."

From Binghamton, New York, comes the report that, on the opening date of the system there, 5,000, or 75 per cent of the entire school enrollment, became depositors, with an average deposit of 50 cents. Some smaller towns have begun their system as 100 per cent. Plans are now being made for the semi-annual survey, which is expected to show that the conditions indicated above are typical whenever pupils are afforded the facilities of this important educational service in well organized systems showing larger participation and increased deposits over the last school year.

Iowan is Charged With Violation Of the Mann Act

Information was filed against Wiley Irby, 22, married, by District Attorney Don W. Stewart, charging the youth with violation of the Mann act. He is charged with enticing Violet Yeoman, 15, of Glenwood, Ia., to Council Bluffs, then to Omaha and finally to Lincoln. The pair stayed in Omaha about a week and about the same length of time in Lincoln when they were discovered by Sheriff Ira Miller in a local hotel, officers say. Irby failed to furnish the $500 bond required of him by United States Commissioner Whitmore.

According to officers Miss Yeoman had wired her mother at Glenwood that she was in a hospital here and that she needed $25. Her mother informed the authorities who began an investigation here finding the girl in a room in a local hotel. The girl was taken back to her mother by the sheriff.

STADIUM DRIVE IN COUNTY NEXT

University Alumni and Former Students Asked to Give $20,000.

Fifty University of Nebraska alumni at a luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce Saturday, planned a day and a half drive to secure subscriptions for the stadium from every alumni and former student in Lancaster county. It is estimated that 1,000 or more were not asked and did not donate during the Lincoln campaign. The county quota is $20,000.

Eugene Holland heads the general committee in charge of the county drive, with F. D. Eager, Lynn Lloyd, Sam Waugh, Guy E. Reed, M. A. Hyde, O. J. Fee and R. E. Campbell. Forty-nine committees will start work Monday morning, each having twenty alumni to see. It is hoped to close the drive Tuesday noon.

Team chairmen are as follows: E. E. Sawyer, E. E. Duncan, Otto Zumwinkle, E. L. Coryell, L. W. Howe, Vic Friend, Clark Jeary, D. L. Pettis, L. M. Trope, Fred M. Deweese, R. E. Campbell, Lynn Lloyd, Al DuTeau, Guy E. Reed, F. A. Peterson, L. A. Flansburg, Stanley Guenzel, K. C. Schulter, P. H. Sawyer, H. Rathbone, Guy C. Chambers, J. R. Hallman, May Meyer, R. A. Russell, William J. Aitken, F. D. Eager, R. A. Bickford, R. L. Theisen, E. T. Bush, C. E. Hinds, Paul G. Ludwick, Claude Wilson, H. P. Weaksser, E. B. Perry, D. W. Miller, James H. Harpham, E. B. No Future Unless Nations Find Way Of Avoiding War

"If the nations cannot find some way to avoid war there will be no future worth prophesying about," declared Dr. Samuel Eliot speaking at a meeting of Unitarians at the Chamber of Commerce Saturday noon. Dr. Eliott declared that he had never considered peace as an objective, but that rather he was profoundly interested in the causes that make for peace, namely, international justice and righteousness. Peace, according to Dr. Elliott, is not passive, but active. Speaking of European conditions he said that the moral collapse was worse than the physical. Southeastern Europe is the trouble spot, in his opinion, and that under existing conditions will be a source of strife, not only for themselves, but for the larger European countries. The breaking up of the Hungarian nation and placing those people under another nation was in his opinion one of the greatest mistakes of the peace conference. W. E. Hardy presided and introduced the speaker.

GET YOUR ORDER IN EARLY

Coal is a necessity. So is Life Insurance. But isn't it strange that the man who never fails to place his order in April for his winter supply of coal because of the monthly increase in price will put off taking Life Insurance year after year notwithstanding the fact that he knows he must pay more for it as he grows older. The family of the man who neglects Life Insurance too long may not have any money with which to buy coal if anything should happen to him.

THE FIRST TRUST COMPANY OF LINCOLN, NEBRASKA

Trust Estate Investments

The Executor or Trustee under a Will, whether an individual or a Trust Company, must take the estate as it is and make the best possible from it. A part of the estate may consist of worthless—or nearly worthless—"blue-sky" stocks; part of it may be in high-grade bonds, and part in real estate in the city or farm lands.

The duties of an Executor may last but little more than a year, but Trusteeship is of longer duration and may extend through the lifetime of an individual who is only a babe when the Trustee takes charge. The Executor's task is to settle the estate affairs and turn over the property to those entitled to it under the Will; but the Trustee's duty is to take charge of and manage the estate for a specified period, turning over the income according to the provisions of the Will.

It may happen that the Trustee finds it to the benefit of the estate to dispose of some investment securities and replace them with others. In such event, the individual Trustee may not have the knowledge and experience necessary to safeguard the estate against purchasing new securities of doubtful value.

Corporation stocks, whether of the highest class or lowest of the "blue sky," cannot become part of any estate managed by Lincoln Trust Company as Trustee. Such stocks, it is true, may be part of the trust estate when taken in charge by Lincoln Trust Company; but none will be bought to replace securities sold or paid off.

Trust estates under our management, when it becomes necessary to acquire new investment securities, are supplied with Farm and City Real Estate First Mortgages, Municipal Bonds, and occasionally Corporation or Railroad Bonds of undoubted worth. Our Board of Directors pass upon what the Trust Officer proposes to buy, and they scrutinize each security with even greater care than when purchasing investments for themselves individually.

Our policy regarding corporation stocks is no reflection upon their merit. They may be of great value or worthless, just as a bond or mortgage may be good or bad or of doubtful value. But fundamentally the two classes of securities are widely different. The bondholder is a lender of funds to a business; the stockholder a part owner in a business. The one usually requires a good margin of safety above the amount he lends; the other takes chances on reaping much bigger returns—or losses.

TIERNAN'S AFFAIRS IN WORSE TANGLE WHEN COURT ACTS

Divorce Decree Granted On Thursday Revoked When Professor Marries On Saturday.

Thought Likely That Bigamy Charge Will Be Lodged Against Teacher.

(International News Service.)

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The law tonight had tied a few more knots in the tangled marital relations of Prof. and Mrs. John P. Tiernan of South Bend, Ind.

Reopening the divorce case in which Tiernan, formerly a law professor at Notre Dame university and one of the "angles" in the notorious Tiernan-Poulin paternity case, was granted a divorce from Augusta Tiernan on Thursday, Judge T. C. Montgomery at South Bend late today revoked the decree that set Tiernan free and set rehearing of the divorce case for December 11.

Judge Montgomery's action followed a conference he held with Mrs. Tiernan, after Mrs. Tiernan became aroused over Tiernan's remarriage this morning at Crown Point to Mrs. Blanche I. Brimmer, of Hansell, Iowa.

Following the conference the judge and Mrs. Tiernan proceeded to the court chamber. Prosecutor Floyd O. Jellison who had been assigned to defend Mrs. Tiernan in the divorce action was called in and Mrs. Tiernan was placed on the witness stand.

Decree Is Revoked.

The story she told was such as to lead Judge Montgomery to believe there had been collusion in the divorce action and he officially re-opened the case and set it for re-hearing.

Tiernan and his bride were reported tonight to be "somewhere in Chicago." Mrs. Tiernan with her three children, including "Baby Billy," whose paternity was questioned by Tiernan, remained in the family home in South Bend, which has been put up for sale.

Earlier today Mrs. Tiernan had told the story of how her husband had forced her to consent to the ddivorce proceedings.

"The divorce had been arranged between us purely to satisfy the public and Notre Dame," she said. "John and I lived together as man and wife until last Tuesday morning. We occupied the same room in our home here. We agreed on the divorce suit. I was forced into it all."

In his divorce suit Tiernan testified they had not been living together as man and wife for several months.

Tiernan Beats Wife.

"It was last Saturday night that Mr. Tiernan beat me until I agreed to permit him to get the divorce on a cross-complaint and give him the custody of our two little daughters," Mrs. Tiernan continued. "John agreed, however, to return them to my custody. Then he said we would go to another town, change our names and re-marry."

Tiernan once came to Chicago to attempt to induce Ralph Obenchain, husband of Madalynne Obenchain, indicted for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy at Los Angeles, to form a law partnership with him, Mrs. Tiernan revealed. They would have operated under the notoriety of "two abused husbands," she said he had told her.

"All the respect I had for John has turned to hate," Mrs. Tiernan said tonight, weeping bitterly.

Mrs. Tiernan recalls the story told her by a clairvoyant at Anderson this week.

Is Told Will Marry Again.

"Within two months you will remarry," the clairvoyant told her. "Your husband will have wealth. You will be happy."

The clairvoyant predicted before it happened that Prof. Tiernan would secure a divorce annd that he would remarry.

"His marriage, however, will be unhappy," she added.

"He will give up uthe custody of the two children. He will not bother you in the future. You will never again be the wife of John Tiernan."

Mrs. Tiernan returned from her trip to the fortune teller early Friday morning, she revealed for the first time today. Pinned to the lamp shade in her home she found the note which told her Tiernan had secured a divorce and that she was free.

Speculation was rife here tonight as sto what the next move in the marital mixup would be. It was expected, however, that a charge of bigamy would be lodged against Tiernan.

Another Complication.

HANSELL, Ia., Nov. 25.—Professor John P. Tiernan's matrimonial venture was threatened with new complications tonight. It was revealed here that Mrs. Blanche Brimmer, the Notre Dame professor's bride, had admitted in a letter, alleged to have been received here October 3, that she was still the legal wife of Arthur H. Brimmer, whom she married in Chicago after a divorce from another man by the name of Rash.

Rev. and Mrs. Charles E. Hawn, parents of Mrs. Brimmer, asserted that her marriage with Brimmer had been annulled.

Brimmer disappeared and about two years ago he was reported to have been killed.

During the trial in which Tiernan attacked the legitimacy of his third child, he started correspondence with Mrs. Brimmer, whom he had met on one of her frequent trips away from home.

A bond of sympathy sprang up between the two, according to Rev Hawn, and at the end of the trial Professor Tiernan proposed marriage.

"The deep interest and sympathy which Blanche felt for Professor Tiernan prompted her to accept this proposal," Mrs. Hawn said.

TO PROVIDE FOR LINCOLN'S NEEDY

Churches and Other Organizations Are to Distribute Thanksgiving Dinner.

Committees Adopt Plan to Avoid All Harmful Duplication.

Lincoln has already made arrangements to provide for most of her needy families on Thanksgiving day. This fact was clearly evident at a meeting held Saturday at the Y. W. C. A., and attended by representatives from various churches and other organizations in the city that hope to meet all real need at this time and avoid all harmful duplication. With this end in view, the committee passed the following resolution:

"Anyone who has already planned to take care of a family for Thanksgiving or intends to do so, should notify, as soon as possible, the office of the Social Welfare society, B2175.

"Anyone who knows a really needy family who would otherwise do without a Thanksgiving dinner should notify the same office. From this central point names will be assigned so that all families can be cared for and result in no duplication."

To Systematize Relief.

The committee looking toward the future strongly recommends that any individuals, classes, societies, or other groups in churches or other organizations who wish to give material relief or for friendly visiting of needy families at any time, should first consult the chairman of relief or welfare committees in their organizations who will be in constant touch with the established welfare agencies of the city.

The members of the committee hope to meet regularly in the future and are considering the organization of a study class for friendly visiting.

The following are the organizations and churches whose welfare committees have promised up to date to cooperate: Plymouth Congregation church, First Presbyterian church, Second Presbyterian church, First Baptist church, Second Baptist church, Holy Trinity Episcopal church, Jewish Relief society, First Christian church, Westminster church, Grace M. E. church, St. Paul Methodist church, Trinity M. E. church, Unitarian church, First Congregational church, City Mission, Junior League, Clinton Community center, Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A., Parent-Teachers' association, Mothers Club of Belmont, Red Cross, and Social Welfare society.

WISCONSIN BOB'S THREATS PUTTING LIFE INTO G. O. P.

Old Guard Moves to Offset Maneuvers of the Radical Leader and Friends.

Take Steps to Lay "Progressive Legislative Program" Before Country.

(International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—"The republican old guard" moved tonight to lay before the country a constructive legislative program at the same time the insurgent progressive members of congress, headed by Senator Robert M. Lafollette, of Wisconsi, meet here early next month to work out a legislative course of progressive action.

Following a conference of "old guard" senate leaders like Lodge, of Massachusetts; Curtis, of Kansas; Smoot, of Utah, and Watson of Indiana, with President Harding at the white house it was agreed the administration forces in congress should unite on a program which should have agricultural credits as its keynote and should otherwise be made to appeal especially to the farmers of the middle west, northwest and far west.

Hope to Offset Radical Move.

It was the frank belief by administration senators that the "radical" maneuvers of Senator Lafollette and his progressive associates could be offset by the republican "old guard" going to the country with a legislative program offering definite assurnces that President Harding meant what he said when he promised early relief from the present agricultural distress in his last message to congress.

Simultaneous with an announcement by senate leaders prominently identified with the administration that republican "old guard" leaders in congress would hold a conference with President Harding at the white house next week for the purpose of mapping out a constructive legislative program for the approaching regular session, a statement was issued by LaFollette and his associates in which it was said that nine senators and twenty-three representatives have thus far accepted invitation to attend a legislative confeence on December 1, arranged by them. A report was current that neither Senator Borah, of Idaho, or Johnson, of California, were among the nine senators referred to. None of the nine senators were mentioned by name in Lafollette's statement.

Dill Unable to Attend.

Senator-elect Dill, of Washington, who defeated Senator Poindexter of that state, sent word he would be unable to attend because he found it impossible to come east at the time set for the conference.

It was stated "letters have been received from influential progressive women and men from a large number of states, expressing their approval of the aims of the twin conferences," the first of which on December 1 will be confined to present and newly elected progressive members and the second to a general airing of progressives views by leading progressive both in and out of a congress.

REPUBLICAN SOLON ATTACKS SUBSIDY

Frear Charges Standard Oil Greater Beneficiary Than Western Farmer.

General Debate On Measure Was Closed With Session Saturday Night.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—General debate in the house on the ship subsidy bill which closed tonight, was featured by a vigorous attack from Representative Frear, republican, of Wisconsin, who charged that the Standard Oil and the United States Steel corporation would profit far more from the subsidy than would the farmer of the middle west. Republican leaders are confident that the bill will pass Wednesday afternoon by a substantial majority.

Speaking for the administration forces, Representative Mondell of Wyoming, summing up the debate, said the democratic opposition was "floundering" and that opponents of the subsidy had no constructive suggestions.

Consideration of amendments will come the first three days of next week. A flood of proposed changes is predicted.

BAYONET RULES CITY OF DUBLIN

Hard Hand of Military Rests On Free State Capital Over the Weekend.

(International News Service.)

DUBLIN, Nov. 25.—The iron hand of military discipline rested upon Dublin tonight and the streets were filled with green-uniformed soldiers of the Free State, armed with rifles and under orders to shoot to kill if the republican irregulars attempted any reprisals for the execution of Erskine Childers.

There was an outbreak of firing during the morning, but the Free State patrols soon restored quiet. Desultory shots continued at intervals in widely separated areas.

Since dawn armored cars, with the sinister snouts of machine guns poked from the portholes, have moved up and down the streets ready for any emergency. Boyish-looking soldier lookouts were perched upon the top of cars, a fair mark for snipers.

Despite the announcement by republican irregular leaders that they do not plan repetitions of violence, General Duck Mulcahy, Free State commander-in-chief, was taking no chances. The vigilance will not relax until Monday.

Dr. William H. Falkes, executive secretary of the Presbyterian new era movement, and one of the ablest men of the Presbyterian church today, has been secured as the leader of the Hastings College week of prayer which comes the first week in December. He has just returned from a very extensive visit in a number of the foreign mission fields. It is probable that no better selection for a speaker during this annual week of devotional services could have been made, for Dr. Falkes is a very pleasing and forceful speaker, and is exceptionally successful in addressing students.

Miss Lillian Griffiths, chairman of the football committee, announces that the annual football banquet will be held on Saturday evening, December 2 in the Taylor dining hall. All alumni and friends of the college who desire plates at this banquet should see that reservations are in the hands of Miss Griffiths not later than the proceeding Wednesday.

There was a large group of Hastings students at the Bronco-Doane game at Crete Saturday. This game closed the 1922 season for Hastings.

A number of persons elected county superintendents of education in the various counties throughout the state are of interest to friends of the college. Among these are the following former students:

Mrs. Alta Speith-Bitner, Banner county.
Mrs. Ella M. Kern, Hall county.
Mrs. Martha Shultz, Adams county.

Swenk, department of economic entomology, in an address Nov. 15, before the Sioux City, Iowa, Academy Science and Letters on the subject "American Birds of Prey." This destruction is causing the middle-west an untold loss in agricultural production, according to Professor Swenk. Only five of the forty species of birds of prey are harmful. Professor Swenk addressed the academy last year also.

The University Journal for November was issued last week.

Dean and Mrs. E. A. Burnett, W. W. H. Brokaw, director of the agricultural extension service, and Prof. Margaret Fedde, chairman of the home economics department, attended the meetings of the Association of Land-Grant college, Washington, D. C., November 21 to 23. Dr. Charles W Pugsley, assistant secretary of agriculture, formerly director of the agricultural extension service of the university, and the Nebraska association of alumni in Washington, entertained the University group. Lincoln Subscriptions to Stadium Fund

Over 1,700 business houses, organizations and individuals of Lincoln contributed $161,717.50 to the University of Nebraska memorial stadium fund. Lincoln's quota was set at $150,000, and the Chamber of Commerce given the job of raising the money.

Over half of the quota was pledged at a dinner at the chamber of commerce attended by 300 leading business men. The drive progressed very slowly for several days, but with a final intensive effort by a large number of chamber members, went over the $150,000 mark on Saturday evening, November 18.

The fact that a large over-subscription is necessary to underwrite construction costs, and have the new stadium in condition to use for next year's games, caused the chamber committee to keep working after the quota was passed. The complete list of subscribers, as released by the chamber of commerce, follows:

The paramount leadership of The Star in individual home circulation is entirely due to the reader interest of the subscribers. This reader interest is based on the value of The Star as a newspaper and nothing else.

The strength of The Star is in its appeal to every member of the family.

No other Nebraska newspaper presents as much news or as much entertainment as does The Star.

Two leased wire services carry the news of the world to The Star---The Associated Press and the International News Service ---providing the strongest news facilities of any Nebraska newspaper.

The world's greatest newspaper cartoonists and feature writers are contributors to The Star---and The Star has more of them than many of the largest metropolitan papers.

Furthermore--

All the news is in one paper---not half the news in each of two papers---and delivered in the evening when you have time to read and enjoy it. There is the satisfaction of getting a full and complete newspaper---not a half-portion.

The people's recognition of The Star's superior merits as a newspaper has made it the favorite paper in the homes of Lincoln.

The city circulation alone represents 87 per cent of all the homes in Lincoln and immediate suburbs---a more intensive coverage than any other Lincoln paper.

NEBRASKA CRUSHES IOWA AGS; DRIVES TO VALLEY TITLE

HUSKERS CLINCH TITLE IN VALLEY

Nebraska Crushes Ames Ags In One-Sided Contest On Lincoln Rectangle.

Score of 54 to 6 Establishes Dawson Team as Champions Of Conference.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

Cornhusker beef and driving power trampled on Iowa State college yesterday on Nebraska field, the Dawson machine riding over the Ames aggregation to a decisive triumph in which the final reckoning was 54 to 6. While the Nebraska offensive was occasionally punctuated by indecision and a mixing of signals, the mighty Cornhuskers delivered smash after smash at the lighter Iowans, paralleling to a string of eight touchdowns during the sixty minutes of combat.

A meagre gathering of five thousand spectators witnessed the crushing defeat of the Ames eleven. Straight football was the main reliance of the Husker juggernaut, the backs driving through the line and plunging off the tackles with such monotonous success that the encounter was all but devoid of thrills.

Quarterback Russell provided the only variance from the Cornhusker system of plunge and smash, smash and plunge. A fake buck at the Ames center by Fullback Hartley pulled the Iowa Aggies in to parry the blow. Russell, however, did not pass the ball to the Nebraska captain instead, the Husker quarterback cleverly hid the oval and then sprinted around end, romping to two touchdowns on his trick.

Drake Out of Title Race.

As Drake, alleged rival of Nebraska in the competition for the Missouri Valley conference gonfalon, could only dispose of the same Ames team by the slender margin of 17 to 7 the overwhelming victory compiled yesterday by the Cornhuskers apparently ends the argument involving titular honors and crowns Nebraska as Valley champions the second successive season.

To Ames, however, goes the credit of scoring the only points charged against the Cornhuskers on the home field this year. Unable to make yardage through the aggressive Nebraska forwards and having but slight success in their efforts to break away around the wings, the Iowans let loose a barrage of forward pass plays in the second period and worked the ball across the Nebraska goal. The Ames achievement while a fluke, due to an error by Referee Reed, was nevertheless, a touchdown and the record cannot be erased.

Wolters Over Nebraska Goal.

Captain Wolters Valley conference champion in the quarter-mile dash, carried the ball over the final chalk-mark. An end sprint of twenty-five yards by Wolters put the Iowa Aggies on their way. A penalty for unnecessary roughness by Nebraska gave the Aggies fifteen additional yards of ground and Roberts followed with a pass to Wolters for a ten-yard gain. Wolters made the catch perfectly, but a savage Cornhusker tackle drove the ball out of his grasp. It was a "free ball" and possession properly belonged to Nebraska, as a Cornhusker player nabbed the oval out of bounds. Referee Reed, however, blew the ball "dead" at the time of the tackle and, during the intermission, explained that he had no alternative despite his mistake, but to rule that Ames was entitled to "possession." Another short Roberts pass to Wolters enabled the Ames captain to cover fifteen yards and sprint across the goal.

Huskers Best In Statistics.

In rolling up their total of eight touchdowns, the Cornhuskers drove and plunged to twenty-seven first downs, while Ames negotiated four. The yardage total was 365 for Nebraska and 108 for Ames. Nebraska attempted five forward passes, completing one for a gain of ten yards. Ames hurled sixteen passes, completing nine for 42 yards. Penalties cost Nebraska thirty yards, while Ames was set back only five. Six Nebraska punts by Lewellen and Hartley totaled 267 yards, while twelve punts by Roberts accounted for 382 yards. The Cornhusker backs returned Ames punts 57 yards. Returns by Ames totaled twelve yards.

Noble Terrific Plunger.

Halfback Dave Noble's terrific line plunging was the outstanding feature of the powerful Nebraska offensive, although Captain Hartley, Lewellen and the Dewitz brothers easily pierced the Ames line or drove off the tackles for consistent gains. The combined efforts of two or three Ames tacklers generally were required to pull the plunging Noble to the turf. Of the husky Nebraska forward wall, Weller and Berquist persistently made trouble for the Iowans by smashing through to smear attempted passes or break up Ames plays.

Had the wishes of the Nebraska coaches been gratified, Ames would have sent a stronger team to Lincoln. The Cornhuskers needed a stiff fight and keen competition to prepare them for the supreme effort of the season—the Thanksgiving battle with Notre Dame.

Husker Subs Delivered.

Coach Dawson made persistent use of substitutes during the second half. An entirely new Nebraska team finished the game. The skill at the pilot position displayed by Herb Dewitz, who filled the quarterback station for the Cornhuskers practically one-half of the sixty minutes of play, must have been pleasing to the Nebraska coach.

Coach Wilsman, former Ohio State fullback and captain, offered no excuse for the Ames defeat.

"There is no comparison between the two teams," he said Saturday night. "The Cornhuskers simply were too good for my men. I don't think there is a man on the Ames squad that could make the Nebraska team. I should say that a 40 to 0 score would fairly represent the relative strength of the two elevens."

CRAWFORD HIGH SCHOOL ELEVEN

Third row—Allen, Barnum, Worthington, Anderson (c), Lathrop, Pipher, Spray.

The Crawford team has an enviable record for the season of 1922, having run a total of 216 points to opponents' 13. The only defeat came from Alliance, champions of western Nebraska, and then only by the meagre one-point margin of a 7-6 score. Alliance was unable to score until the last few minutes of play, when a touchdown and successful try-for-point put Crawford out of the state championship race. Losing only two men of this team, Crawford should be a strong contender for the state title next year.

YALE ROUNDS OUT SOUR GRID SEASON

Bulldog On Losing End In His Annual Conflict With Crimson Foe.

Brilliant Return By Owen Of Yale Punt Turns Tide In Harvard's Favor.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

(International News Service.)

NEW HAVEN Conn., Nov. 25.—In a game almost entirely without incident, Harvard defeated Yale this afternoon by a score of 10 to 3. The winning touchdown was produced by Owen, who caught a punt on his 37-yard line and slipped through the Yale defense for fifty-six yards to the three-yard line and subsequently over the goal in a plunge through the right side of the line for the winning touchdown.

All the drama, all the glamour and all the color of the game was produced in this one play, smashing side-stepping run that changed the whole complexion of the game and swerved the scales from defeat to victory.

The Harvard team had nothing else. Neither did Yale. Occasionally the Blue watted a forward pass, some times it tried a plunge into the line and at others it essayed a punt, but the Harvard defense was always equal to the occasion.

Harvard Halted Yale Attack.

For the pass for the punt and for the run it had a defense which turned back the Yale attack at all times. It was always ready and never unprepared. When Offearn inserted into the Yale line-up in an eleventh hour change, attempted to turn the ends, a Harvard tackle was always waiting for him. Occasionally the brilliant Yale back broke loose for gains, exceeding or up to 20 yards. But when it came to a matter of gaining when yards meant yards, the Harvard defense turned him back.

The game was noteworthy for the fact that Georges Clemenceau was one of 78,000 spectators. The famous "Tiger" of France was a guest of the two universities and, just to show that he was entirely neutral changed seats between the halves, switching from the Harvard stands to those which Yale occupied. During the change in positions the Harvard band obligingly played the "Marseillaise" and crowded stands stood with uncovered heads just to prove that they had fortitude for the November freezes as well as patriotism for dear old France.

Owen Star of Game.

As for the game itself, there was nothing to it but Harvard. Taking advantage of the gain in punts, it rushed the ball down to the goal line and thence over. A big factor in this all-important advance was Owen who caught a punt and, save for the fact that he was forced out of bounds, would have made a personal matter out of rushing the ball over the goal line then and there. To all intents and purposes that runback of a punt was the beginning of the end for Yale. It defended its goal line nobly from thence onward, but the damage had been done. There was no adequate reply to that one and only Harvard touchdown.

In an attempt to overcome this early advantage, Charlie O'Hearn essayed no less than five field goals. Only one was successful. This was kicked from the 24-yard line in the second period. Other and frenzied attempts were tried from 14, 19, 45 and again from the 45 yard lines by the same Mr. O'Hearn, but all of them were either wide or short or both.

Yale Lacked Punch In Pinch.

Time and again Yale was near the Harvard goal line knocking at the door of success, but when the punch really counted, the old punch wasn't there. That old sliding, side-stepping run of Owen seemed to have taken all the punch out of the Yale offensive. In vain it tried every art of it knew, still the Harvard defenders appeared to have an edge at the critical moment.

In the fourth quarter a blocked goal from placement attempted by O'Hearn led to a recovery of the ball by the Eastman on the Yale 40-yard line. A series of short rushes brought the ball to about the 18-yard line, when the Yale line held and Pfaffman was substituted for Ham-

HASTINGS, Neb., Nov. 25.—A. F. Holste today accepted a contract for three years more as athletic coach at Hastings college.

TECH TEAM EASY FOR NOTRE DAME

Rockne's Fighting Irish Romp to 19 to 0 Triumph Over Carnegie Eleven.

(Special to the Star.)

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 25.—Supplementing a consistent running attack with an effective passing game, Notre Dame defeated Carnegie Tech, 19 to 0, here today and kept the Tartans outside the Irish 30-yard line. The game was played on a snow covered field, but 20,000 people braved the freezing temperature to witness the contest.

Don Miller, Crowley, Laiden and Stuhldreher, the flashy sophomore backfield, starred equally in the Notre Dame attack. Miller and Crowley ran the end for big gains and Stuhldreher revealed unusual smartness in directing the attack and in passing.

Layden Fills' Castner's Shoes.

Layden, who has been playing second-string halfback throughout the season, took Costner's place at fullback in the Notre Dame lineup and played clever ball, using the triple threat to advantage.

Robertson, Tech's backfield star was effectively stopped by the Irish ends and was held to short gains. Line bucks by Brumbaugh, following double takes, counted for most of the Tech yardage in the five first downs made by the Tartans. The Tech aerial game failed to gain a yard.

Notre Dame made 16 first downs, four of which were due to passes of 10, 12, 22 and 13 yards. The Irish completed four of seven attempted passes. Layden and Anderson broke even in a punting duel. Each team was penalized 50 yards.

Captain Carberry, Degree, Vergara, and Regan starred in the Notre Dame defense, which stopped every Tech threat. Kristoff, Newman and Captain Anderson starred defensively for Tech.

Here's Another Bergman.

Bergman, one of the second-string outfit with which Coach Rockne started the game, ran consistently. His sprint of 35 yards in the first period, the longest dash of the game, led to the first score, which was made by Stuhldreher, when he recovered a fumble made by Layden as the latter pushed toward the goal from the three-yard line late in the first quarter.

Another Irish score was balked, when the first half ended when the ball in the possession of Notre Dame on the two-yard line, following a 23-yard run by Layden, a 22-yard pass from Stuhldreher to Layden, and a 13-yard pass from Stuhldreher to Miller.

The only solid punch delivered by Tech came early in the second half. Two first downs in midfield resulted in short gains by Robertson, Potter and Brumbaugh. The Notre Dame line stiffened and a punt sent the ball deep into Irish territory. A penalty had Notre Dame in a tight place on it's own 2-yard line, but Layden successfully punted to midfield.

Irish Grab Tech Pass.

Regan intercepted a Tech pass in midfield and the most brilliant period of the game followed, with the flashy Irish backs running the ends alternately. Crowley hit for 13-yard, Miller turned the other flank for 21, Crowley came back with eight, Layden added seven and Miller nicked the final nine yards for a touchdown.

The last score came early in the final period. Crowley blazed the way with a sensational dash through the Tech team for 22 yards. Stuhldreher Miller and Layden punched for short gains to the 12-yard line, where Stuhldreher cleverly passed to Layden for 12 yards and the last touchdown. Degree kicked this goal. Layden missed the first two tries.

MIDDIES' STREAK SMEARED BY ARMY

After Three Successive Wins, Navy Team Nosed Out In Thrilling Battle.

Rally Late In Final Quarter Turns Apparent Defeat Into Victory

BY GEORGE BARRY.

(International News Service.)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25. — A hair-raising, eleventh hour finish, such as football fiction is built upon, and which kept 52,000 people on their feet continuously, enabled the Army to stop the string of Navy football victories on Franklin field this afternoon and emerge victorious in the twenty-fifth annual struggle with the Navy by a score of 17 to 14.

The Army was licked a dozen times during the hard, bitter struggle on the half frozen field, but the eleven young men from West Point resolutely refused to admit it and, as a reward for their never-say-die spirit, they won the most spectacular and sensational battle that has been fought in the long quarter-century of struggles between the two service schools.

Tonight the streets of Philadelphia are filled with hundreds of joyous gray clad young men, singing the praises of Mike Garbisch, the pernicious Army center, George Smythe, the diminutive Army quarterback, and "Woody" Wood, the smashing, crashing fullback, who combined to make the Army's victory possible.

Crowns For Army Heroes.

If their names do not go down in West Point history with a ring round each one, then there's no justice in this world, for it was due to this trio that the Midshipmen went back to Annapolis tonight without their fourth straight victory over the Cadets.

Along in the second quarter Mike Garbisch, and a stiff northwest wind that was handpicked off the North Pole, combined their forces and sent a field goal hurtling through the Navy's goal posts for three points. The kick was well over forty yards and Mike Garbisch and the northwest wind can share equally in the glory of it.

It didn't seem much at the time, as the Navy had previously scored a touchdown, but in the final analysis, as the shades of darkness were falling over the field and blotting out the picture, those three points stood out like a lighthouse in a storm-tossed sea.

Goal Kick Deciding Factor.

It was by this narrow margin of Mike Garbisch's three points that the Army won. It was savage, give-and-take football all the way, with frequent time out for injuries, one of which finally stripped the Navy of its star back field man, Little Steve Barchet. The ground was half frozen and bare of turf and when a man went down it hurt.

The first quarter was scoreless, with the Navy having the clear edge on ground gained. The ball was deep in Army territory when the whistle blew and the teams changed sides.

Starting the second quarter, with the Navy backing the wind on the Army's 30-yard line, the Middies began to get in their deadly forward passing. The first pass failed, but undaunted, the Midshipmen tried another, McKee to Taylor, which was highly successful. Taylor planted the ball on the Cadet's 10-yard line and on the next play McKee shot through tackle for the entire distance and the first points of the game. Barchet kicked the goal.

Navy Leads at the Half.

They lined up again and after a give-and-take of punts in mid-field, the Army finally worked the ball to the Navy 40-yard line and it was here that Mike Garbisch made his great boot. There was more savage fighting for the remainder of the period, but it went for nothing and the half ended with the score 7 to 3 in favor of Navy.

The third period started prosiacally enough with a series of line bucks and kicks in mid-field, the Army finally getting the ball deep in its own territory. Smythe made a snaky sensational run to Navy's 32-yard line and after a couple of shots at the Navy line which were barren of results the Cadets tried a long forward pass. Smytho shot the ball to White and the fleet Army end almost got over. He was downed on the Navy one-yard line, after a real heartbreaking run. The Navy line stiffened for a moment and held Wood for no gain, but on the next he crashed through for the remaining inches and Mike Garbisch kicked the goal.

Middies Pull Two Passes.

Then came the fourth period that made football history. With the ball Navy's in mid-field, on the first play Norris, who had substituted for Barchet, shot a successful forward pass to Parr that carried the ball to the Army's 20-yard line, and repeated it a moment later, to Cullen for eight yards.

Then the Navy abandoned passing and Norris crashed the line for four yards and first down. Again the Navy sub carried the ball, planting it this time on the Army's one-yard line and on the next play Conroy crashed through for the touchdown. Norris kicked the goal.

The Navy seemed to have the game on ice, but the Cadets wouldn't concede it. The teams lined up again and Army kicked off. After a series of shots at the Army line, Cullen kicked to Smythe.

Return of Kick Turns Tide.

The fleet Army quarter received the ball well in his own territory and then proceeded to electrify the crowd by carrying it through a broken field clear to Navy's 12-yard line. In a twinkling the aspect of the game had changed.

The next few minutes were agonizing to the Cadets, who were yelling for a touchdown. The Midshipmen stopped 'em dead and threw both Smythe and Wood for losses. The Army appeared to be going backward. Then Wood and White engineered a successful forward pass to

ALEX ASPIRES TO EQUAL CY YOUNG

St. Paul, Neb., Prodigy Hopes to Enjoy 10 More Years of Big League Pitching.

Grover Alexander has no particular goal for the finish of his major league career. The daddy of big league pitchers is Denton Tecumseh Young who was a major leaguer at the age of 44 and who saw service for twenty-two consecutive seasons.

Grover Alexander was born at St. Paul, Neb., February 26, 1887. To the Cy's record of pitching when 44 years of age, Alex will have to wear the uniform when the 1931 season opens.

"And don't be so sure that I won't be around with a block of youngsters that spring, either," mused Alexander.

Pitched on Nebraska Prairies.

Grover Cleveland Alexander on the prairies of Nebraska in bare feet with a yarn ball. And there are hundreds, thousands, yea, hundreds of thousands of kiddies today pitching in bare feet with a yarn ball on prairies and corner lots. Some day they may be as mighty as Alex. Their future is before them and with it is a series of pitching tips for the youngsters in ragged breches from no less a distinguished pitching authority than Grover Alexander.

When Alexander was pitching on those Nebraska prairies twenty-five years ago little did he dream that a career comprising twelve brilliant seasons as a major leaguer, a member of pennant ball clubs and participating in a world series would follow. But fame and fortune travel hither and thither, time and destination unknown and equalling Alexander's success is not beyond the reach of the hundreds of thousands of wee tots on the prairies and corner lots.

Many Go Back in a Hurry.

How many young phenoms join the major league class as Alexander did twelve years ago only to pass out after a brief fling?

What was wrong with them? What was their defects and what caused them to slide down the patch of oblivion so rapidly?

Walter Mails won seven successive games for the Cleveland Indians in 1920, rescued a pennant and has just been unconditionally released.

Ferdinand Schupp was a sensation with the New York Giants in 1916 and 1917, winning thirty games with ten depats in those two seasons. He was traded two years later and now is drifting along with no particular port in sight.

There are many other examples similar to Mails and Schupp.

Offers Advice to Youths.

Alexander's prairie days have been lived and passed. However, he has not forgotten the youth who is living the life he did. He was asked recently to expound his views upon the open surface for the generation that is to arrive. Alex tackled the assignment with a smile and with seriousness.

"I don't know that I have anything of importance to impart," said Alexander, "but if I can help a youngster reach the top I feel that I owe it to the game."

With Alexander there is not an ounce of egotism. He walks with the same pace and beat of the pulse going down Chicago's Michigan boulevard, cheered by thousands as he does ignored by the visitors of his home city who are not familiar with his success in his profession.

No one is considered by baseball experts better qualified to present pitching tips to kiddies than Alexander. His series is found in the following:

Control Is Necessary.

"Remember that all successful pitchers have control. Some claim it is a gift of nature. I believe it is mastered through practice.

"Keep your muscles in condition. Nap Rucker, the southpaw, had a clever idea to limber the muscles of the back and shoulders by tossing a ball a few feet over his head and catching it for fifteen minutes each morning. This is good stuff.

"Don't work too hard the day before your turn to pitch. Pitch to batters about fifteen minutes the day after you have worked.

"Play the corner, especially the inside line for the batters who stand close to the plate.

"A fast ball doesn't mean to burn one through the center of the plate. Feed it in the weak spot of your man.

"In spring training don't show off everything you have the first day. The arm has been resting all winter and it needs a slow, careful course to reach its proper strength and power.

Avoid Freak Shoots.

"Avoid experimenting with freak shoots. Stick to a fast ball, curve and slow ball. That's enough stock.

"You will find the majority of batters favor a fast ball. Therefore, curve them a plenty with two strikes.

"Don't become disheartened. You may find several batters who fancy your stuff, and hit you regularly.

"The batter's game is to produce base hits. Rog Hornsby must have an average more than .500 against me. I haven't forgotten one game where he hit me for two triples and a home run. He came up in the ninth with three on. I was one run in front, and he fouled to my catcher.

"Keep your confidence, because the batter is more excited and nervous than the pitcher during a tight rally.

"Remember, you have eight players with you. In twelve seasons in the National league I have yet to pitch a no-hit game.

"Don't criticize your teammates who commit errors. The fellow who blunders is the one whose courage you want to keep up. He may come along later and deliver the hit winning the game for you.

Accept Manager's Advice.

"Accept all advice from the manager. He's your boss, and don't organize cliques opposing the manager, disagreeing with his judgment.

"Above all things don't pitch with a sore arm. Tell your manager about your condition before each game so he will know what pitchers are available.

"Don't let your heart sink when you have been taken out of the game. It happens to all of us.

"Clear eyes and a clear brain are necessary, which means that you can't associate with midnight lights and fool batters the next day.

"Take recreation occasionally, but not to the extent of consuming the hours that belong to sleep.

HAWKEYES DOWN EVANSTON TEAM

Iowa Scores Seventeenth Win In Row; Claims Big Ten Grid Title.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 25.—The powerful Hawkeye machine retained its hold on the "big ten" title by trouncing Northwestern here this afternoon 37 to 3. It was Iowa's seventeenth straight victory, Coach Jones' warriors having started their string with the last three games of 1920.

The Hawkeyes were invincible. Northwestern fought gamely, but could not stem the tide that poured through its lines.

An early spurt netted three points for the Purple. After McElwein had carried Minnick's punt to the Iowa 40-yard line, four passes and one line smash brought the ball to the ten-yard mark. Patterson then kicked a goal from placement.

..... March to Touchdown .....

The Hawkeyes, with Captain Locke and Miller driving through the line, marched 85 yards to their first touchdown, Miller scoring early in the second period.

Locke scored the second touchdown in a series of smashes from the Purple 20-yard line after Nugent had intercepted a Northwestern pass.

With Iowa on its opponent's 17-yard line, Rich, at quarter for Locke, recovered Miller's fumble and on the next play passed to Kadesky, who dashed over the goal line. The half ended: Iowa 18; Northwestern 3.

Rich, Miller and Locke pounded through for another touchdown in the third period, Locke going down over the line. Northwestern tried frequent passes, but most of them were incomplete. Patterson's fumble paved the way for a fifth Iowa touchdown in the final period, Locke scoring.

McIntyre intercepted Patterson's pass and raced to the Northwestern 20-yard line. Locke carried the ball over from the one-yard line. Minnick's attempt at goal was successful for the first time in the game.

METHODIST RALLY CAME TOO LATE

Wesleyan Counts Twice On Creighton In Final Minutes of Play.

(Special to The Star.)

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 25.—If Wesleyan had cleared the field of obstruction through the game with the ease with which it functioned during the final few minutes of play today, the Methodists' colors would have been hoisted above those of the Creighton Blue tonight.

But Wesleyan couldn't get started and Creighton took the North Central conference combat by a score of 23 to 18.

Creighton had all the scores in its own column until the closing minutes of play. Then the Wesleyanites got busy. Outweighed and outplayed, but bursting away for gains that penetrated the bill team's defense repeatedly, the Lincoln suburbanites forced the Blue battalion to throw its entire strength into defense when Wesleyan held the leather and that defense, first wall and secondary, crushed every drive and air attack with remarkable consistency.

The hilltop offensive, diversified with every form of yard-accumulating known, swept through the capital city team for the winning scores with a brilliance that was thrilling. Lane, Tevlin, Manley and Yechout formed the backfield quartet.

While they were facing the invaders, the hilltop zero line was never threatened. But when they were away, the fabled mice did some fast playing, and incidentally accounted for two Wesleyan touchdowns in the last few minutes of play.

OHIO STATE WINS EXCITING BATTLE

Keele Races Through Entire Illinios Team For a Touchdown.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 25. — Ohio State defeated Illinois in an exciting and hard fought battle here today, 6 to 3.

After battling even terms after the first half, Illinois opened with an aerial attack in the third period which carried the ball to the 15-yard line, when Clark, Illinois quarterback kicked goal for the initial score of the game.

In the final period furnished the sensation of the game, when Keele receiving the ball on a punt, raced through the entire Illinois team for a touchdown.

Clark broke through the Ohio defense in the first period for a sixty-yard run which looked like a touchdown, but a fleet Ohio back downed him.

MAROON PUT OUT OF BIG TEN RACE

Chicago U. Fizz'es As Title Contender When Held to Tie By Badgers.

STAGG FIELD, CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Chicago lost all claim to the Western conference title here today when the Marion team was held to a scoreless tie by Wisconsin. Wisconsin not only presented the most stubborn defense the Maroons have seen this year, but clearly outplayed the Staggmen on the offensive. John Thomas, Chicago's plunging fullback, was kept on the bench until the final period. But even with Thomas in the game, the Stagg offensive failed to get going.

In the first period and again in the second, Quarterback Barr attempted field goals from the 35-yard line. This was the closest either team came to scoring until the final period. In the last quarter, Fullback Taft intercepted a Maroon pass and reached Chicago's 23-yard line. A Wisconsin fumble, however, spoiled this chance.

The Maroons lacked the punch in the final quarter, after working the ball to the Badgers' 26-yard line.

Detroit Downs W. & J.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 25.—Like a Phoenix, the University of Detroit eleven arose from its ashes today and conquered the great Washington & Jefferson team, 20 to 9. The game was filled to the brim with sensational plays and thrills.

Harry Vreeland, Larry Welch, Paul Hogan, Tom Loomis—in fact, the entire Detroit team—starred.

Captain Brenkert was the shining light for the Presidents.

Dartmouth Pulls Surprise.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—Dartmouth sprung a surprise by defeating Brown, 7 to 0, before a crowd of 75,000 people at Fenway park today. Dartmouth outplayed Brown throughout the game. Dartmouth excelled in kicking. Leavitt scored the touchdown.

BELATED RALLY SAVES MICHIGAN

Wolverines Trailing 7 to 0 at End of First Quarter; Win, 16 to 7.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 25.—Michigan gridsters tonight retained possession of the "little brown jug" for which Michigan and Minnesota football teams have fought intermittently since 1903. Michigan retained the prized jug and attained a tie with Iowa for the "big ten" conference championship by beating Minnesota 16 to 7 here this afternoon.

Minnesota at the end of the first quarter led, 7 to 0, by virtue of a touchdown and a kicked goal. It was only the second time the Wolverines' goal line had been crossed this year.

Rally Late in Game.

Early in the second quarter, Michigan carried the ball to the Gophers' three-yard line, only to lose the ball on downs. They were not to be denied, however, for Martineau's punt went out of bounds after traveling 15 yards. Cappen and Kipke advanced the ball to a touchdown. Still the Yost men failed to keep on even terms when Captain Goebel missed the goal. Shortly afterward Cappon carried the ball to the Gopher four-yard line by a 40-yard dash. In two more plays he carried the oval over. Blott kicked goal.

Then the Wolverines added a field goal in the final quarter.

Star Owners Are Loud in Praise Of the New Car

"We are especially pleased with the Star car, the latest product of the Durant Motors Co., says H. A. Sharrick of the Chapman-Sharrick Motor Co., dealer in Durant and Star cars.

"It is without doubt the greatest value ever offered to the public in an automobile, while it is low in price, being the lowest priced fully equipped automobile ever manufactured.

"The stream line body gives it the appearance of a much higher priced car.

"Its surplus of power and flexibility developed by the Continental engine makes it an easy car to handle and the ideal car for the lady driver. The long underslung springs, together with the low, deep cushions and roomy interior gives to the Star car an ease of riding never before attained in an inexpensive automobile.

"The chassis built of heavy material well braced and carrying the celebrated Durant tubular backbone insures long life to the car. The price is so very reasonable that it appeals to the conservative buyer who is looking for his money's worth in comfort, appearance and service.

"The car has been received with a generous and enthusiastic reception and the people who have received their Star cars are all highly elated with their performance and we often hear the remark, 'We like it better every day'."

CHAPPELL DEFEATED.

CHAPPELL, Neb., Nov. 25.—Chappell high school was defeated by Scottsbluff here yesterday by a score of 19 to 12. The game was well-played both teams showing considerable class. R. Brestel and A. Lindley featured the play for Chappell.

MOON SALESMEN HOLD CONVENTION

Review Past Year and Plan For Next Year at St. Louis Meeting.

Monday and Tuesday of this week one hundred distributors and district sales managers of the Moon Motor Car company met in St. Louis to review 1922 and to make sales and advertising preparations for 1923.

The gathering was a very enthusiastic one as the automobile industry has enjoyed exceptional business and the majority of distributors have made money which naturally placed them in a very good mood.

1922 was by far the biggest year in the history of the company. More cars are being built now in one month than were formerly built in five or six months and 1923 will see even greater increases.

The visitors were elaborately entertained by the company and the convention was brought to a close with a banquet at the Missouri Athletic association. Stewart McDonald, president of the company, talked on "What the Company Has Accomplished in the Past and Their Ambitions for the Future." R. D. McDarby, advertising manager, took over the advertising plans for 1923 and impressed enthusiastically upon the dealers that the effectiveness of the company's national advertising will to a great extent be lost unless the distributor backs up his local newspaper advertising with what the company will do nationally.

Mr. F. H. Rengers, general sales manager, painted a picture of 1923 and difficulties the distributors will experience in the spring months in getting cars. This difficulty will be magnified on account of transportation, and he impressed upon them that the only way a dealer can guard against a shortage of cars this spring was to take them during the winter months and store them. He then called the roll, asking each distributor that his requirements would be for the year of 1923 and also the number of cars he would be in a position to give specific shipping instructions for the months of December, January and February. The totals of the year ... and the number of cars the factory will take during the ... months for winter ... was ... .

ECONOMY RECORD ON LONG JOURNEY

Nebraskans Reach Santa Ana Singing Praises of the Nash Car.

SANTA ANA, Calif.—Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Cox, North Platte, Neb., are delighted visitors in Santa Ana—so delighted, in fact, that they have settled there. They are friends of Mr. and Mrs. William ... of this city.

The visitors left home in their Nash sport model July 20, and wended their way to Santa Ana by easy stages, making detours and visiting many points of interest en route.

Cox declares that he incurred no expense on the trip for repairs to his car. The distance traveled was 1,585 miles and the consumption of gasoline, which at some points cost 40 cents a gallon, was 88 gallons. Twenty-three quarts of oil were purchased at a cost of $9.50.

Cox came over the Lincoln highway to Cheyenne, Wyo., and went into the Yellowstone park. Coming over the Blue mountains he found the road in very bad condition. At one point on the mountain road work was in progress and it was necessary to cover a distance of fifty-five miles at a rate of speed not in excess of fifteen miles an hour. The Nash negotiated the long grade without serious trouble and went through ... road on which ... twenty-four machines had to be assisted.

Cox says that it was a common thing for him to pass cars on this ... section of road. He asserted that many motorists detoured 300 miles in order to avoid the Blue mountain road in its present condition.

"If I should buy another car it would be a Nash," said Mr. Cox. "As a hill climber it is the equal of any car on the market. My machine now has been driven more than 7,000 miles and I have never had a wrench to the engine or changed a spark plug."

Big Compliment, To Chevrolet

All kinds of people, all kinds of other ... boats, short ones, ... that have turned up, have turned down ... coupes and ... sport ... and just ... cars ... Materials ... cotton, silks and satins ... all kinds, dark suits, ... suits and all the ... between ... What an endless variety of tastes there are!

Isn't it rather remarkable, then, that 1,000 different people are every day buying Chevrolets—no matter what it means ... whereas all buy ... of a comparatively limited number of models.

Quite a compliment to Chevrolet, don't you think?

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS FOR INSURING LONGEVITY OF THE CAR.

Proper Water Level.

When filling the radiator of the car, allow enough water to pass in it to bring the level over the end of the vent pipe.

Gasoline Consumption vs. Speed.

On a 10-mile run an automobile traveling 25 miles an hour will consume less gas than a car traveling 45 miles an hour.

Engine Bearings.

Worn engine bearings can be detected by the oil gauge pressure. As the bearings wear the oil circulates more freely and the pressure drops.

Noises Caused by Rust.

An annoying squeak may sometimes be traced to the ... fasteners. The springs become rusted and cause a squeak in the body varnish. A little oil will stop the noise.

When Bolting Parts.

When parts are to be forced together ... bolt through ... the ... otherwise the threads may be ruined.

Care of Tire Chains.

When the slightest sign of wear appears in the cross chains of tire chains ... where the cross strips ... will last several years longer.

Rounding Corners.

When turning into the right at street intersections ... as close ... right ... possible before turning. When turning to the left at street intersections get into the extreme ... of traffic.

The Handy "S" Wrench.

The mechanic's "S" wrench is the safest to use when removing a bolt because it has a handle of the proper length which is scientifically proportioned to the work which the tool must do. The ordinary wrench ... the threads of the bolts or nuts when the handle is too long for the capacity of the jaws.

Lost Motion in Steering Gears.

Watch for the lost motion in the steering mechanism and have it attended to. Few drivers realize how much their safety depends on the steering gears. If the lost motion in the steering wheel is found to be ...

Keep the Car Together.

Every nut on the car should be firmly secured by a split-pin, locknut or a spring washer.

creasing rapidly, one of the ball and socket joints of the drag link is coming loose and will soon let go. Stop the car immediately and investigate. It is easily tightened with a large screwdriver. Set it up as tight as possible and secure it with a long cotter pin or piece of wire.

Faked Engine Power

The power of an engine is often faked by means of gearing it low at the rear axle. When buying a car it is wise to find out what the reduction ratio is. If the reduction is very low, a comparatively light engine will pull considerable weight uphill in "high" because the car is really not in high gear. If the engine is of large dimension and geared very low, it will perform beautifully on hills and will have long life, but it will be a glutton for gas and will not usually give more than 60 miles per hour speed. If the engine is of small dimension and geared low it will perform well enough on hills for a time and will be economical on gas, but it will wear out quickly and will not develop speed.

Never attempt repairs that you know are beyond your skill.

The odor of burning rubber is a sure sign of a short circuit.

Blow out the gasoline feed line with compressed air from time to time.

Panel Steel Body—Seats Four—$1445

To be really complete, a closed car must combine fine body work and appointments with a thoroughly dependable and highly efficient chassis. There can be no compromise in either equipment or mechanics.

When you examine the interior of the Jewett Coupe you will find that the equipment is indeed complete. The upholstery is both beautiful and lasting. Right at your hand you will find every accessory that makes closed car motoring a real luxury.

And, under the body, is a chassis of tremendous strength and performing ability. There you will find the smoothest of six-cylinder motors and driving parts that defy the severest tests of road punishment.

Such is the Jewett Coupe—a thing of beauty when parked in front of your home and the most reliable of companions on the highway. And, though you might expect to pay $800 or $1000 more, for these fine car luxuries, the price is $1445 f. o. b. Detroit.

The WILLYS-KNIGHT Sedan, $1950

What greater proof of Willys-Knight performance could you ask than this letter from Mr. R. M. Bennett, in which he says:

"In 1914 my father, Mr. E. T. Bennett, purchased the first Willys-Knight car that came to Memphis, Tennessee. This car is now eight years old and is not only still running but is more powerful and more quiet than on date of purchase. The car has covered more than one hundred thousand miles and has not required one cent in repairs to the motor. The only mechanical work that has been done is the relining of the brake bands. This car is now being used and driven by my brother and has not seen a garage or overhead cover for the past four years."

Incidentally Mr. Bennett just bought a new Willys-Knight Sedan "sight unseen," and took delivery from the freight car without even a demonstration.

DECLARES WATER PROJECT FEASIBLE

Government Engineer Makes Gratifying Report to Promoters.

(Special to The Star.)

HASTINGS, Neb., Nov. 25. — All expectations of the principal promoters of the supplemental water project for Gosper, Phelps, Kearney and Adams counties have been surpassed in the report of F. F. Smith, government engineer in charge of the survey.

In conference with Holdrege, Minden and Hastings, people here Mr. Smith said that his investigation showed the project to be practicable; that 55,000 acres could be irrigated in these four counties and that a hydro-electric power plant on Plum creek in Gosper county would develope 7,500 horse power. In his twelve years experience as an irrigation engineer for the government he said, he had never seen a more practicable project than this one.

There is a natural reservoir in Plum Creek valle that eeds only a 75 foot dam to impound sufficient water to cover 200,000 acres one foot deep. The department of agriculture is investigating the storage qualities of the soil, as it is intended to irrigate the land with waste waters in the fall and spring to supplement the natural rainfall, and if report is favorable the construction of the project will be pushed vigorously with congress.

Cornelius Hooker Has Narrow Escape From Death On River.

(Special to The Star.)

WOLBACH, Neb., Nov. 25.—Cornelius Hooker, eleven years old, residing near Spalding, while out in a boat on the Cedar river hunting ducks with his two older brothers, almost lost his life by the accidental discharge of his gun.

The swift current of the stream shot the boat against the bank causing it to capsize, throwing the boys into the water. As Cornelius went over the side of the boat he grabbed his gun by the barrel, the hammer striking the side of the boat and discharging the weapon.

The entire charge of shot entered his body and ranged upward along his back, making an ugly wound, which at first it was feared would prove fatal. He fell in the deep water, but when he came up the brothers assisted him to the bank and carried him to the home half a mile away. The patient is resting easy and his chances for recovery are improving.

One Deer Law Does Not Apply To Chevrolet

Hunting laws in Michigan provide that only one deer may be shot by each hunter. There is a national sales rule, however, that says you may sell as many Chevrolets to a man as you can.

Some local firms broke this rule, the Korsmeyer company bought three Chevrolet utility coupes the J. C. Ridnour company bought three, Harpham brothers, Grainger Brothers and many others in Lincoln bought from one to three.

One hundred ninety-eight national companies have fallen in line and purchased from one to all of their cars. Chevrolets. The Morton Salt company purchased thirty. The Acme Cement and Plaster company seventy. And other companies from one to hundreds.

Mr. A. B. Preble local representative for the Stromsbert-Carlson Telephone Manufacturing company of Rochester, New York who travels a large force of men, informs us that his company has adopted Chevrolet as their standard and that his utility coupe purchased from the Dailey Motor Car company in June of this year has cost his company the enormous sum of ten cents for repairs and adjustments in a little over five thousand miles.

VALUES ARE BUILT INTO BUICK CARS

Salesmen Believe That Is the Reason For Their Great Popularity.

Every sale of an automobile is based on dollar-for dollar value to the man who is looking for the greatest value from his automobile. In these days when economy of transportation is one of the greatest factors in the industry. All automobile owners are looking for values, because the industry has reached that stage where unscrupulous buying is a negative quality.

Talking with any of the members of the Nebraska Buick Auto company's sales organization, who have been keeping tab for the past month on the wants and whims of the automobile buying public, you are convinced that value is alone responsible for the great popularity with which the whole Buick line of fourteen models have been received all over this central west. C. D. Lampert, sales manager of the Nebraska Buick Auto compny, declares that the inbuilt value of Buick cars is one of the outstanding developments of the industry during the last year.

FUND TO FIGHT T. B. IN CATTLE IS ABOUT GONE

"Area Work" Will Be Discontinued in 21 Counties Next Month.

State Bureau to Carry On Compulsory Testing and Inspection.

By expanding the work of bovine tuberculosis eradication further than was contemplated when the legislature made its appropriation in 1921, the state bureau in charge of that activity has almost exhausted its available funds seven months before the close of the biennium and, on December 1 will dismiss ten or twelve field men and discontinue what is known as "area work" in twenty-one counties.

Announcement to this effect was made Saturday by Agriculture Secretary Stuhr, in whose department the work has been carried on. The federal government, Mr. Stuhr said, will withdraw an equal number of its men who have heretofore been on duty in Nebraska, co-operating with the state bureau.

The original appropriation made in 1921 for combatting tuberculosis among cattle was $285,000. In the special session last February this was cut to $235,000, as part of Governor McKelvie's program for effecting a $2,000,000 decrease in total appropriations.

Counties where the co-operative "area work" has been conducted up to this time, and where it will be dropped next Friday, are Adams, Buffalo, Butler, Clay, Dodge, Douglas, Gage, Hall Hamilton, Lancaster, Madison, Nance, Otoe, Platte, Polk Sarpy Saunders Thayer, Washington, Wayne and Webster.

Will Keep Up Dairy Work.

Inspection and testing of dairy herds, which is made compulsory by state law, will not be abandoned. Sufficient money remains out the the appropriation, or will be provided out of the fees collected, Secretary Stuhr said, to keep this activity going. There will also be enough he thinks, to pay the state's share of indemnities allowed to owners for animals condemned and slaughtered.

The federal government works in conjunction with the various states in fighting bovine tuberculosis, on the same basis as it does in constructing highways. That is to say: It sends men and furnishes money for the purpose when the state matches the government's expenditure with an equal sum devoted to the same object. When the state stops spending its money, federal aid is withdrawn.

The so-called "area work" is the systematic and periodical testing of all breeding and dairy herds within a county, until the tubercular animals have been weeded out. It was tested in Lancaster and Gage counties a year and a half ago, and has been taken up since then in one county after another.

Secretary Stuhr asserts that the work has been very popular with cattle growers and that in some counties they indicated a desire to have the testing continue, waiving all claims for indemnities. But this could not be done, as the funds remaining would not pay the salaries of the field men, Stuhr says.

Legislature Must Provide More

"We simply had to stop the work in order to avoid running up a deficiency," he stated. "When it will be taken up again, and to what extent, depends on the legislature. Of course, our state organization will be disrupted, and likewise the federal organization, and when the work starts again they will have to be built up from the bottom."

Out of the $235,000 appropriation available, which was intended to run until June 30, 1923, the end of the fiscal biennium, about $115,000 was spent in reimbursing owners of cattle found to be diseased and condemned by the inspectors. The state pays one third of each animal's appraised value, the federal government one-third, and the other third is the owner's loss.

Most of the remaining $120,000 has been disbursed in salaries, expenses and supplies for the state's field men and for postage, telephone and telegraph bills, and miscellaneous items. What is left will pay office salaries and expenses during the rest of the biennium.

During the month of October, a total of 1,493 herds or bunches of cattle were examined, numbering 22833 animals in total. Of that number, 22,629 were passed, while 325 were found to be infected with disease and 6 were classed as "suspects." Disinfection was carried out on 116 premises.

ELKS FIX DATES FOR BIG CIRCUS

To Be Held In City Auditorium During Month Of February.

Lincoln Elks have tentatively decided to hold their big indoor circus during the week of February 11 to 18. Arrangements are now being made with one of the leading producing companies of the country to manage the affair, thus giving assurance that everything is to be of the highest order.

The purchasing committee for the Christmas tree to be held at the auditorium Christmas morning has been busy for some time and the chairman, Frank DuTeil, believes that the boys and girs of the city are going to be more highly delighted this year than ever before. L. M. Garman, chairman of the entertainment committe, has promised a show that will please the youngsters beyond their expectations.

The selective invitation membership campaign is progressing in a manner highly satisfactory. The next "pep" dinner is to be held at six o'clock next Tuesday evening, at which time Chairman Kurz is expected to make a report on the activities of the various committees. There is also to be an address by a well known member of the order.

The annual memorial exercises are to be held in the lodge room next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The address is to be delivered by John J. Ledwith, past exalted ruler, and a high class musical program will be rendered. These exercises are open to the public, a general invitation being extended.

EXPECTING A REAL FIGHT ON JOHNSON

It is asserted, therefore, that the meeting held in New York was illegal and nothing done there by the capitol commission had authority to create the office of secretary and pay the incumbent a salary, which is also questioned.

Already Paying One Supervisor.

The capitol commission is already paying for the services of a building supervisor, or "clerk of the works," who was sent here from New York by Architect Goodhue, in accordance with his contract obligation to oversee all construction operations. This man, W. L. Younkin, is drawing pay from the state at the rate of $5,200 per year plus his living expense in Lincoln.

It will be rather difficult to convince Governor-elect Bryan that another $5,000 supervisor is needed for the capitol job. If the architect should decide to recall his present clerk of the works and employ Johnson instead, it would change the situation somewhat; but even then the capitol commission, with Bryan as its chairman, would have the right to veto the substitution if it should see fit.

Mr. Bryan has been invited by Governor McKelvie to meet with the capitol commission in December, when Architect Goodhue is to be in Lincoln, and he will probably do so; but the governor-elect's friends say he will not O. K. any arrangement heretofore made, or to be made before he takes office, which will in any manner tie his hands as chairman of the capitol commission for the two years next ensuing.

It is understood to be Bryan's attitude that he will rely upon his own appointee in the state engineer's office, who will be an ex-officio member of the commission with himself, as its official adviser in all matters relating to construction contracts and the work done under them.

Local Concern Has New Glare Shield For Auto Drivers

The Ferris-Hendrix Manufacturing company, 132 North Twelfth street, handles the newly patented safety glare shield for automobiles, which does away with the glare when meeting other cars.

The safety glare shield is a small colored glass which is attached to the windshield in front of the driver and can be raised and lowered at will. Mr. Hendrix and Mr. Ferris believe that this shield will in time take the place of the automobile lens.

The shield can be attached to all makes of automobiles. It has been tested out and has proved in every case to do away with the glaring lights of an approaching automobile, according to the distributors.

The glare shield has been on the market for only a few weeks and garage men in the vicinity of Lincoln are stocking the shields as rapidly as they are manufactured.

NEBRASKA STATE BANKS GAIN FIVE MILLION DEPOSIT

Gain In Cash In Spite of Car Shotrage For Three-Month Period.

Secretary Hart Believes Business Getting On Solid Footing.

Against the handicap of an acute car shortage which has largely interfered with the marketing of grain and potato crops, thus holding down the amount of cash in farmers' hands, the 969 state commercial and savings banks of Nebraska gained $5,000,000 in deposits during the three months from June 30 to September 30 and on the latter date had reached high tide for the present calendar year in that branch of their business.

While the total cash reserve dropped off about $2,000,000 during that period, the average under this heading was still 20½ per cent in September, or one-third more than the legal requirement of 15 per cent. In June, the reserves had reached the abnormally high mark of 22 per cent.

Trade and Commerce Secretary A. E. Hart looks upon the showing made by the banks under date of September 30 as showing that they have recovered from the worst effects of national deflation and financial readjustment, and that the business of Nebraska is getting back upon solid footing once

Report Summarized.

There were 502,847 depositors in the 969 banks reporting to Hart's office on that date, and the gross deposits were $238,209,123. Cash reserve amounted to $48,985,505. The summary follows:

Vance presided as toastmaster.

Dr. Davis was presented a medallion upon which was engraved his profile. With this, according to the inscription on the back, went a life membership in the Lincoln Dental society. Says Dairy Farmer Not Making Enough On His Investment

A dairy farmer with an investment of $40,000 nets $4,000 a year, Frank Olmstead, of Rokeby, declared in an address before the Lancaster County Milk Producers' association, Saturday afternoon at the court house. Mr. Olmstead said that at the present time he is producing 1,050 pounds of milk a day from twenty-four cows. At the present price of milk and butter fat this daily production will bring $24.20 on the market in Lincoln. To produce this it costs $10 for 1,000 pounds of hay, $5 for 500 pounds of corn-cob meal, $5.25 for fifteen hours of labor at 35 cents n hour and $3.65 for hauling, or a total overhead expense of $23.0. The net profit on the 1,050 pounds of milk is 30 cents, according to Mr. Olmstead's calculation. For 100 pounds of milk at the present price delivered in Lincoln producer receives $2.37 and his overhead expenses amount to 1.34, he stated. The producer, however, may figure a saving in hay, which he produces, and labor.

"The dairy farmer is making a little on his investment, but it is not enough," the speaker declared. Then a day's average cannot be based on a yerly average. In fact to arrive at a safe nd sane conclusion one must figure several years' averages."

The association expects to hve a membership in the county of 400 by the first of the year. Several new members were added Saturday. The organization is planning community organizations, each of which will send delegates to each meeting of the central organization in Lincoln. The next general meeting will be held in the court house, November 9.

send men to the penitentiary for the taking of human life with an automobile. Your organization maintains a vigilance committee for running down the thieves who steal the cars of your members. The activities of this committee may well be and should be extended to include all violations of the motor vehicle law. Excessive speed is not the only menace to life in the operation of automobiles. Illegal lenses and lights, cutting corners and passing other cars at street intersections jeopardize lives. Your vigilance committee could well serve the public by cooperating with the law enforcement officers in checking up and reporting all violators of the motor vehicle law, and I know of no better service your organization could render the public than this.

3. If the laws we now have would be respected and could be enforced many lives would be saved and thousands of dollars of damage prevented. However, we should have some additional legislation enacted by the incoming legislature and your club can do much to assist in the creation of public opinion that will cause these laws to be enacted, and then your organization can do much, as heretofore suggested, in seeing that such laws are enforced. Particularly, I suggest: (a) Each and every motor vehicle driven on the public highways of Nebraska should be bonded or insurance carried for the protection of those who are damaged by the reckless and careless operation of the vehicle. I suggest legislation that provides that every motor vehicle be bonded or insured, for the benefit of those who may be damaged, before it be permitted the use of the highways. (b) Each and every driver of a motor vehicle should be required to carry a license and that driving of a car without a license should be penalized. This license should be subject to suspension and revocation for violations of the law by the lessee. (c) Impounding of automobiles for violations of the law by drivers should be provided and in the event of frequent and continued violations the state sould confiscate the automobile.

Irresponsible Drivers.

Some of the most inexcusable and saddests accidents are caused by drivers who are financially irresponsible; drivers against whom a judgment of five cents could not be collected. Just this week, as county attorney, I was consulted by a man who wanted the county to buy a cripple a wooden leg to replace the one that had been broken by the man who consulted me while he was driving his own car. He told me that he couldn't even buy a wooden leg for his victim and yet he had money enough to operate an automobile.

I know of no organization that can do more toward the building up of a sentiment that will stand for the strict enforcement of such laws as we now have and for the enactment and enforcement of such laws as may be hereinafter enacted, as your organization.

I thank you very much for your inquiry and wish to assure you that I will cheerfully contribute in every way as a public official, as a member of your club, and as a citizen to the improvement of present conditions, the enforcement of present laws and the enactment and enforcement of future legislation. If you or your organization think that I can be of any further service to you I am yours to command.

Yours truly,
CHAS. E. MATSON,
County Attorney.

ADDRESSES COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION

Dr. Mayhew Speaks at Meeting Of Local Association Saturday Night.

That the testimony of expert witnesses is regarded with not much respect by lawyers, juries and even the court in many instances was deplored by Dr. J. M. Mayhew in an address before the Lancaster County Bar association monthly meeting at the Grand hotel, Saturday night.

To remedy this Dr. Mayhew suggested that the court appoint the witnesses for expert testimony instead of allowing the experts to be retained by either side of the case. The subject of his address was: "Medical Expert Testimony." Dr. Mayhew is conceded to be one of the greatest diagnostitians in the United States.

No expert speaks for his science as a whole, he said. The distinction between the ordinary witness and the expert is that the ordinary witness testifies as a conclusion; the expert testifies as to conclusions which cannot be verified. The expert is and should be considered a fudiciary, although he has no power to enforce.

Former District Judge P. J. Cosgrave in a round table discussion, which followed the address, said the lawyers themselves were much to blame for the disregard of expert testimony.

Guy C. Chambers, president of the association, presided. About seventy-five attorneys attended.

WILL OBSERVE EDUCATION WEEK

American Citizenship to Be Stressed in Schools December 3-9.

Movement Has Backing of President, Educators and the Legion.

In an effort to foster education for all Americans the week of December 3 to 9 has been designated American Education week by a proclamation of President Harding and by the American Legion, the National Education association, and the United States bureau of education, co-operating. Requests for speakers on Americanism are being made to the American Legion. A special topic has been appointed for each day as follows: Sunday, For God and Country; Monday, American Citizenship; Tuesday, Patriotism; Wednesday, School and Teacher, Thursday, Illiteracy; Friday, Equality of Opportunity; and Saturday, Physical Education.

Ministers of all denominations have been urged to preach a sermon on education Sunday and all communities urged to hold mass meetings. Attention to the children who will be the citizens of tomorrow, naturalization, Americanizing of immigrants, and impressing the duties of citizenship, are the subjects for citizenship day. To instill a fuller sense of patriotism in the hearts of Americans stress will be laid on the significance of the flag, on the use of the English language, and on the duty to vote. No illiteracy by 1927 is the goal of the movement which advocates that immigration be restricted until illiteracy among native foreign born has been removed.

Equal opportunity for education for every American boy and girl and a square deal for the country boy and girl, are to be emphasized on Friday. The need of physical education will be stressed Saturday. It is contended that a sick body makes a sick mind, hence the need of good health for the acquisition of knowledge.

Nebraska Has Had About 300 Authors, Says Miss Hopper

Nebraska authors and their lives were discussed Saturday afternoon by Prof. Charle May Hooper at a meeting of the Nebraska Wesleyan auxiliary in the home of Mrs. I. B. Schreckengast, University Place. The speaker had known personally several of the authors whose works she handled. Particularly was she acquainted with Dorothy Canfield Fisher in the latter's childhood. Mrs. Bess Streeter Aldrich of Elmwood received detailed description from Miss Hooper, who asserted that Nebraska has possessed bout 300 authors. A biography of these have worked in the last twenty years.

In the discussion which followed the paper, several ladies participated. The books of Willa Cather and her treatment of Bohemia and Swedish characters, her method of writing and her coming visit to Lincoln were mentioned. Dean Lillian E. Swan presided during the program Saturday as chairman for the year of the program committee. The auxiliary will hold a formal dinner in January. Arrangements for this will be made by Mrs. F. M. Gregg, assisted by the matrons of the organizations.

Assistant District Attorney Don W. Stewart will present about twenty-five cases to the federal grand jury which convenes here Monday at 2 o'clock. Cases involving two bankers will be among those considered by the inquisitorial body. Several alleged conspiricies to violate the liquor laws, one of them involving a number of Lincoln men, will be brought to the jury's attention. Automobile thefts, narcotic laws violations and complaints under the Mann act will also be considered. Those indicted will be tried at the present term of federal court, according to Mr. Stewart.

Asks Governor For Protection From Klansmen

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 25.—Appeal for protection against what was termed a threatened invasion by the Ku Klux Klan of the little town of Mer Rouge, in retaliation for information given detectives working on the mysterious disappearance and reported murder of two men, was received at the office of Gov. John M. Parker here tonight.

Signed by a committee of four residents of Mer Rouge, the appeal charged that "insofar as Mer Rouge is concerned the administrative machinery of the local government is so broken down that it is practically impossible to indict members of the klan for their violations of the law."

Due to a shortage of grain cars approximately 400 Kansas elevators are closed.

Tiger Knows Now Why U. S. Has Such Fine Soldiers

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 25.—Georges Clemenceau threw weighty international affairs to the zero winds this afternoon and cheered Harvard to victory over Yale.

The "father of victory" with a crimson feather tucked in the band of his hat, risked health in the cold Yale bowl to see the classic.

"Bravo! Bravo!" he exclaimed to Col. C. E. Bonsall, his companion, when the Crimson eleven came onto the field; "I think they'll win."

The Tiger made a mistake here, because Bonsall is a Yale man, but the war premier didn't know it.

Clemenceau watched the game with keen interest although he didn't know much about the technique.

"It's clear, all but those what-do-you-call-'em's, forward passes," he said after the game.

Bonsall was waving his arms like a semaphore in explaining the play, but the Frenchman apparently did not quite grasp the idea.

Between the halves the Tiger and his party walked across the field to the Yale side of the bowl, to the tune of the "Marseillaise." Seventy thousand spectators forgot football momentarily and cheered the aged statesman.

The presence of Clemenceau served as a check to Yale's usual doings after the game. The Blue band of rooters out of respect for the Tiger's feelings, refrained from playing and singing the Yale song "Bright College Years," until the war premier left.

The melody of the song is the same as "Die Wacht Am Rhine," and Yale sent the cheer leader to confer with Louis Lefevre, Clemenceau's secretary, before venturing to sing it.

When told that the tune was the same as that of the German national anthem, the secretary shouted "No! Mon dieu, no!" And so they did not.

Clemenceau was apparently impressed with the roughness of the game. "Now, I understand why you Americans make such fine soldiers," he said. "If they live through that they are sure to make good soldiers."

After the game Clemenceau went to the home of President Angell of Yale to thaw out and have tea. Then he went back to his private car and retired.

Amplification.

The two essential parts of a receiving set are an apparatus for tuning the antenna circuit to the wave length of the desired transmitting station and an apparatus for demodulating the received signal so that the diaphram of the phones will be effected. Before the vacuum tube came into existance the chief demodulator used was a mineral having the peculiar physical property of allowing current to flow only in one direction through its contact with the point of a fine metal wire. With this sort of a detector or demodulator no amplification is obtained.

The first vacuum tube to be brought into use was the two electrode tube consisting only of a filament and plate. This tube is purely a detector and does not amplify the signal. It is much more desirable than the crystal in that detection is more sure as it does not depend upon a cat whisker resting on a sensitive spot of a mineral as does the crystal detector. On the crystal detector all spots are not sensitive which means that particular care must be taken to get on a sensitive spot when operating.

The three electrode vacuum tube may be used as a detector by using a "C" battery or grid condenser. This tube amplifies as well as detects so that signals which may be too weak to be heard with a crystal or two electrode tube can be heard by use of the three electrode tube.

Even though the three electrode tube does amplify as well as detect, in many cases its amplification is not sufficient to bring in a station with desirable loudness in which case more three electrode tubes can be used in connection with it to amplify the signal still further. The amplification can be made either before detection or after detection. In the first case the amplification is called radio frequency amplification and in the second case it is called audio frequency amplification.

Both these methods of amplification have their advantages and disadvantages. To betin with the telephone current produced by the detector is almost proportional to the square of the voltage of the radio frequency signal which acts upon it. To illustrate the comparison of radio frequency amplification with audio frequency amplification suppose that a given amplifier will amplify a signal ten times. When this tuba is used as a radio frequency amplifier it will give an increase in signal strength of 10x10 or 100 times and when used as an audio frequency amplifier cannot be built to function as well as audio frequency amplifiers, more especially on low wave length. This would seem to indicate that the audio frequency amplification is superior to radio frequency amplification, but, however, audio frequency amplification has its draw backs also. Audio frequency amplification does not only amplify the audio frequency signal but also amplifies all the variations in current which are unavoidable accompaniment of mechanical vibrations of the audio bulbs along with the irregularities of the electrochemical action in the batteries. On the other hand, signals which are too weak to be detected will never be brought out by the audio frequency amplification no matter how many stages are used, where by radio frequency amplification the signal will be amplified enough to be detected.

Precautions Necessary.

In construction a radio frequency amplifier more precautions must be taken than in the case of the audio amplifier. The regeneration must be made with the detector tube as before and the radio frequency tubes and transformers must be put in separate grounded metal compartments.

Several methods of coupling the plates and grids of tubes in cascade may be employed. Some of the methods are as follows: resistance coupling, inductance coupling, and transformer coupling. The amplification per stage in the resistance coupling method is proportional to the radio of the coupling resistance to the total resistance of the plate circuit. Theoretically then, it may be seen that the coupling resistance should be the highest possible. This can not be attained in practice as the higher value the coupling resistance has the greater "B" battery must be used for a given plate voltage. The advantage of resistance coupling is that all moderate frequencies are amplified with equal strength. The disadvantage of the resistance coupled amplifier is that the plate filament and grid filament capacities of the adjacent tubes cause a feed back action and produces oscillations in the amplifying tubes. In order to overcome this instability to some extent grid leaks, condensers, balancers and other apparatus are necessary.

Inductance Coupling.

Inductance coupling consists of an inductance used in place of a coupling resistance. Here the extent to which signals are amplified depends upon the proportion of the choke coil reactance to the total impedance of the circuit, in which case the amplification decreases with the frequency.

Transfer coupling has the advantage over inductance coupling in that no grid blocking condenser is necessary and a step up ratio of turns can be arranged which will impress a higher potential on the grid of the next tube and consequently gives greater amplification.

Both transformer and inductance coupling have the advantage over resistance coupling in that the inductance associated with the capacities in the tubes gives a very high impedance to the circuit, which is desirable as brought out before. However, this advantage is only manifested at a certain band of frequencies which is again undesirable. For this reason radio frequency amplifying transformers can only be designed for use in connection with given tubes, to operate satisfactory on a given band of wave lengths.

Boosting Broady For Commissioner

A number of Lincoln insurance men are interesting themselves in presenting the name of J. H. Broady for insurance commissioner under the new state administration. Mr. Broady is not a candidate for the place, the insurance men said.

The following statement was given out.

"Lincoln insurance men have been looking for a high grade man who can all can endorse for insurance commissioner. In this they claim to be representing the policy holders rather than the companies. Insurance companies of all kinds pay into the insurance department $161,000 each biennium. The expense of operating this department is $56,150. The general fund receives the largest boost from the insurance office outside of the general taxes.

"J. H. Broady is not a candidate for the place but a large group of Lincoln insurance men are urging him to become one."

There are five applicants for the place.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.

Speculators of the decline, again finding support lacking and bullish interests apparently indifferent, launched another successful attack on prices today on the stock market. Representative shares were hammered down 1 to 3 points, a number closing at or near the low levels of the week. The plan for the exchange of stock in the Bethlehem-Midvale Steel merger did not find much favor among speculative interests, those issues being depressed about 2 points each and carrying with them to lower ground a number of other independent steels, including Republic and Crucible. United States Steel common got down to 101⅛. Conspicuous strength was shown by Pan-American shares, but Standard Oil of New Jersey slumped 6 points, Studebaker sank as low as 116⅛ a loss of 6 points, and losses of 2 to 3 points also took place in Columbia Gas, Baldwin and Lima Locomotives, American Can, Corn Products and Great Northern preferre. The closing was weak. Sales approximated 480,000 shares.

Opening prices in today's stock market were irregular, most of the popular issues losing ground, while a few ordinarily inactive stocks made good gains. Terms of the Bethlehem-Midvale merger which were announced after the close of the market yesterday apparently were disappointing to the speculative fraternity, Bethlehem B dropping 1⅞ and Midvale 1½. Weakness also was noted in Continental Can, U. S. Realty, General Asphalt, Balwin and Goodrich, all off ¾ to 1½, and the last named at a new low for the year. General Baking moved up 3 points to a new high record for the year, and General Electric climbed 2⅞; moderate strength also developed in Piggly Wiggly, Burns Brothers A, Fisher Body, Chicago, Great Western preferred and Standard Oil of New Jersey, the gains ranging around a point each. Foreign exchanges opened firm.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Bradstreet's today says:

Little change in the aggregate of activities, trade as a whole being satisfactory, but a quite definite shifting of interest from primary lines of distribution to the jobbing and retail branches, is in evidence this week. For this, cooler weather in many western districts, the growth in holiday buying and the advanced stage of the ordinary fall trade season are mainly responsible. Accompanying these developments have been some notable changes in movements of important staples growing out of a slight further easiness of the car situation.

Grain marketing aided by best prices of the season, has increased and coal loadings last week were close to the year's record, but movement of other freights seems to have decreased, which would make it seem fairly certain as intimated last week that car loadings as a whole touched their peak in the last week of October, falling slightly short then of reaching the high peak total set up in mid-October of of 1920. Current loadings, however, exceed the past two years. Weekly bank clearings, $7,226,748,000.

GRAIN MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 25.

WHEAT—Moderate selling by commission houses induced by a lower range in values at Liverpool tended to give the wheat market here a downward slant today during the early dealings. Interest of shorts here was somewhat cut down because of yesterday's bulge in prices, and the market showed a reather easy undertone. The opening, which raneged from ⅛ to ⅝c lower, with May $1.16⅝@1.17 and July $1.07⅝, was followed by a slight recovery and then something of a general setback.

Later wheat values broke to a new low for the week, liquidation setting in when bullish news failed to develop. The close was weak, values showing a net loss of 1⅛ to 2⅝c, with May $1.15⅜@1.15½ and July $1.06⅜@1.07.

CORN—Corn and oats followed the course of wheat. After opening unchanged to ⅝c off with May 69⅞@70⅛c, the corn market continued to sag.

Corn followed wheat the market lacking support, and closed weak at a net loss of 1⅛ to 1⅝c, with May 68⅝c to 68¾@⅞c.

OATS—Oats started unchanged to ⅛c lower, May 43⅝c, and later continued to decline.

PROVISIONS—Higher quotations for hogs gave a lift to provisions.

BUSINESS OR LOVE FACTOR IN DEATH OF GARAGE OWNER

Police Lean to Opinion That Laun's Sharp Practices Cause of Murder.

Chamois Glove Beside Body Leads to Belief Woman In Case.

(United Press.)

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—"Handsome Joe" Lanus' hidden fortune was traced by police tonight as a probable clue to this mysterious slaying.

The auto dealer had untold wealth, estimated at $10,000,000, according to close friends, who believe his fortune and not a woman was the motive back of the shooting.

Lanus was found lying on the floor of his garage, two bullet wounds in his back. Beside him were two revolvers and a woman's glove, mute evidence of the strange crime.

"Lanus' fortune was many times greater than was generally believed," one of his business associates said. "I saw his income tax returns last year and I believe his wealth would total more than ten millions."

Lanus' business and love affairs were numerous and romantic, his friends told police. Back of them were stories of loves, quarrels and intrigues.

He was a shrewd business man. He had scores of deals with women customers which he always handled himself.

Many Affairs With Women.

His affairs with women were multiple, and he was a famous figure in the night life of cabarets and roadhouses.

A heretofore unrevealed chapter in the life of the millionaire auto dealer was revealed at the inquest tonight when Louis Morris, a former salesman for the slain man, testified "Handsome Joe" had a wife and son living in the south. The boys was attending a southern university, Morris said he understood. His information was not def... regarding Lanus' married life.

Lanus' many friends knew him as a lothario bachelor, fond of girls and a wolf at finance.

This startling revelation will add new angles to the tangled web of mystery and intrigue surrounding the man's murder.

The secret of his death, police said, might be involved in his family connections, hitherto untouched in the probe of the tragedy.

Miss Alice McArdle, confidential secretary to Lanus, said she knew nothing of any marriage.

Miss McArdle testified regarding a visit of a Miss Ryan to the slain automobile dealer's place of business shortly after the tragedy.

Miss Ryan, according to the testimony, had learned of the shooting through a Miss Walsh, a telephone operator. The telephone girl, it was said, listened in on calls to the garage after the tragedy. Both girls were questioned by police.

Hot Words With Customer.

Search was made for J. H. Laurin, one of Lanus' customers, after Miss McArdle told the coroner of an argument between the two over an alleged debt of $186 owed by Laurin to Lanus. The dispute grew heated, she said, and Lanus threatened suit if the debt was not paid.

Lanus' murder grew out of one of his affairs of the heart or his business deals, police were certain, as they analyzed the following theories of the crime:

1—That the rich bachelor was slain by a jealous rival in a revolver duel over a mysterious wearer of the chamois glove.

2—That Lanus, merciless in his dealings with delinquent customers was killed by a business enemy out of spite.

The first theory was given most credence during the early stages of the investigation. The missing "Cinderella" wearer of the chamois glove found near Lanus' body was believed certain to hold the key to solution of the crime. It was she, police believed, who phoned the garage a few minutes after the shooting and asked "is that you Joe," and hung up when a police officer asked her identity.

The business quarrel theory was given support by a majority of the investigators tonight on the strength of the stories of Lanus huge fortune which his secretary told police had been largely acquired in recent years through his sharp and merciless policy in dealing with customers.

The former premier is bearing the brunt of his many activities with no sign of fatigue. From Chicago he will go to St. Louis, thence to Washington, Baltimore, Annapolis and back to New York.

LIFE AND CHARACTER READING

We are coming to the latter edge of the cusp known as Scorpio Sagittarius and the influence of Sagittarius supreme will begin to make itself felt. This is the point of energy and invincible determination. These natives learn by means of books and sometimes a great deal more by listening and observation.

The conscience of these people often has a terrific struggle due to the fact that the goodness of Sagittarius pulls against the easier morals of Scorpio and the former influence is sometimes lost, but more often conquers.

People of this date should observe simplicity in all things and carefully guard against emotion and passion.

The governing planet is Mars and the birthstone is a topaz.

QUICK REALTY TRANSFERS

Many pieces of property are for sale that never bear a placard, and the way to know of the realty market is to watch the Wants.

Home owners and those who possess business property and acreage are often called upon to turn their holdings into cash. Owners leaving the city, business changes—these and scores of other conditions—prompt many realty transfers.

When a condition arises that makes it necessary to sell realty quickly—the Wants invariably accomplish the desired results.

Boys Reclaim Discarded Cheese Boxes Which Are Transformed Into Miniature Radio Sets

At the moment this picture was taken Wood and Slayton Pierce, sons of Dr. and Mrs J. S. Pierce, were listening in on a radio progrom That privilege is a daily treat with the large radio, by which they have tuned in on concerts and speeches in New York City, Atlanta, and Salt Lake City, as well as those at home. The map in the background is not the enemy line, but shows the stations from which the boys have heard, each pin being placed on the name of a city.

Slayton, on the right, is holding the home made radio, constructed of a cottage cheese box and copper wire.

BY LULU MAE COE.

"Let's throw this away."

"No, no. It might come in handy some time."

"Goodness, these things have been lying around since grandmother was a girl. They won't be used for the next fifty-seven years."

"No, I thought I might make it over again. You know, keep things seven years—"

"Well, let's throw these boxes away. They are just trash."

"No"

"Why?"

The annual household drama, when mother and her first assistant helper clean the attic. Everything to daughter is trash, everything to mother has been carefully laid away, and should be preserved by the family for the proolematical millenium. There is always a discussion, mother generally winning.

Small brother suddenly comes to the fore as an ally now, and answers for himself sister's final why. Certain round boxes are his dearest possession, and he clings to them all with the hope that they too may become of use. He guards them more carefully than the signals of his football team.

The lowliest made thing has come into its own. Small brother has brought it fame. Families are consuming large portions of a certain homely food that the young hopeful may indulge his newest fancy.

The Secret Is Out.

Cottage cheese boxes make radios. Therefore the close guarding of all boxes by the small boy.

Two Lincoln boys who have used the boxes that come in at the back door to acquaint themselves with the happenings of Lincoln are Wood and Slayton Pierce, sons of Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Pierce 1505 Garfield street.

The process of manufacture of the new radio is not difficult, but at that it takes a certain ingenuity to achieve a radio- it cannot be called a set. The cottage cheese box, fitted with a lid, is made into a radio by the addition of a few copper wires and the brass clips that hold manuscript paper together. The brass pins on the side of the box, five or six in number, denote the different wave lengths, over which another wire is run to tune in. A crystal set, over which a copper wire is moved, to find a sensitive spot completes the tuning in, with the addition of the receivers from an ordinary radio set.

The apparatus is, of course, too small to hear more than city news and music, but it is extremely novel in appearance. It could be carried without difficulty in a bag or pocket to while a way an hour in a hotel bedroom or to take one's thoughts off having a tooth filled or a boresome caller. Boys have been quite thrilled with the new and inexpensive radio, and the Pierce boys have sold a number to their friends.

Now Have a Big Set.

Having gotten about as much pleasure as possible from their invention the boys were given a manufactured set, with which they are having all kinds of fun. On the day of the Kansas-Nebraska game, they tuned in at Lawrence and could hear the whole game, the cheering, the music, and the incidental noise. Following that, they tuned in on the Lincoln Star program, on which the returns were being broadcasted, and were able to have a minute account of the game.

To carry the idea into rather detailed accounts, Slayton and Wood are keeping a map of all the stations on which they tune in and can hear. So far they have gotten stetton as far east as New York City and west to Salt Lake City, north to Minneapolis and south to San Antonio. Other stations they have heard are Denver, Wichita, Fort Worth, Waco, Sioux City, Kansas City, Louisville, St. Louis, Atlanta, and Philadelphia. For every station heard, the boys put a pin in the map, and it is assuming a most pinned appearance.

The boys say that some of the best concerts come from Atlanta. The station there generally tunes in a little later than the others, and the atmosphere is perfectly clear of sounds. In addition to being so clearly heard the Atlantans put on some of the very finest music so far heard. Every day, if they care to, the boys hear the Kansas City Star without difficulty.

OPINIONS BY THE SUPREME COURT

Mrs. Vora L. Bartlett Loses Her Appeal to High Tribunal.

Rewick to Get $4,050—List of Decisions Rendered Saturday.

When Mrs. Cora L. Bartlett of Lincoln obtained a divorce and $7,000 alimony from Thomas P. Bartlett, and subsequently made a settlement with him for the division of their property and payment of a sum of money, the effect was to cancel the will which he had previously made in her favor and which he forgot to change before he died.

In making this pronouncement, the Nebraska supreme court sets aside its former decision in Mrs. Bartlett's favor, as against Mrs. Rebecca Lahr sister of her former spouse, and his other immediate relatives. It denies her appeal from the district court of Lancaster county, which found that there had been a full adjudication and settlement between the husand and wife, following the divorce decree, and that the will had thus been revoked.

Rewick Gets $4,050.

The high bench also affirms the verdict and judgment of $4,050 which Trac- C. Rewick obtained in Lancaster county against the Deres Lumber & Coal Co. on the ground that he had been induced by false representations to sell the corporation 75 shares of its stock which he owned, for less than it was worth. He claims he was induced to part with the stock for $25 a share, when in fact it was worth $55. The jury allowed him about $56 a share more than he received in the sale.

Must Do Time for Robbery.

Dave Hurd and Roland Shafer, sentenced for six to fifteen years each in the penitentiary for robbing Barney Kelso of $24, in Burt county a year ago, must serve their time, says the supreme court. The evidence is held sufficient to sustain the jury's verdict, and the penalty is declared not excessive. Witnesses testified that the defendants beat up Kelso and another man in committing the robbery, so that one of the victims was rendered unconscious.

LONG TIME CREDIT PLAN ANNOUNCED

Milburn Wagon Company, Maker of Electric Trucks, Has New System.

Announcement of a time payment plan has just been made by The Milbur Wagon company, manufacturers of Milburn electric trucks.

Two plans are offered, under which the buyer can purchase Milburn electric trucks on a part cash and part time basis.

One embraces payments over a twelve month's period, the second payments over twenty-one months. Substantially all other details of both plans are the same.

The first payment is made when the order is signed, and amounts to 10 per cent of the total purchase price; the next payment is made on delivery of the truck, and amounts to 15 per cent of the purchase price, freight and war tax being paid at this time.

This leaves a balance of 75 per cent, which is divided into equal monthly installments, and is either spread over the twelve or twenty-one months' period at the option of the buyer.

Interest at 6 per cent per annum on unpaid balances is charged, plus an amount varying from $75 to $220 to cover the cost of time-financing and insurance, the difference being due to size of truck and length of time credit is required.

The Milburn Wagon company is now manufacturing electric trucks in one ton and one-half ton sizes especially suited for bakers, laundries and department stores, and have recently added a 500 pound unit known as the Milburn electric merchants' delivery model 27-D.

This latter vehicle is intended for merchants whose loads are light and of small bulk. Central power stations and other public utilities can also use this vehicle to economical advantage as a service car for departmental use.

Moving Pictures Of Palmer's Bees

(Special to The Star.)

YORK, Neb. Nov. 25.—C. B. Palmer, the somewhat noted bee culture man of Bradshaw, has gotten into the educational movies. Mr. Palmer has become so well known in honey production that recently the extension department of the Nebraska college of agriculture sent moving picture photographers to Bradshaw, who spent the better part of a day taking 365 feet of film. The pictures show the bees at work, the methods which Mr. Palmer uses in taking care of his busy workmen, and many interesting things about the bee business.

Nebraska Professor, When a Boy, Expressed Desire to Learn Sanskrit; Today, Master of Many Languages, He Has Played Part in World Affairs.

BY LULU MAE COE.

A little boy wrote in his diary:

"When I'm grown up I am going to learn Sanskrit."

Sanskrit—an unknown key to a recondite world to most eight year old minds. A world of lolly pops, eternal play, and no books is all that the kiddie, half-past-seven-going-on-eight, would ask of life. To learn because learning is the most interesting thing in the world to some would overcome the most credulous imagination.

Possibly, to this one little boy the stars inclined and gave him for a brief moment a glimpse of the future. It may have been given him without cognizance on his part to know his destiny. Queer wish for a child, to know a subject that very few adults know, something as far from the ordinary in the average child as nymphs and fairies must have been in his.

The Desire to Learn.

He achieved his wish, however. He achieved much more, more than even his infant intellect could grasp. He did not know of the many strange tongues that someday would be as natural to him as the English he spoke. He did not know that that wish in its consummation would be the "Open Sesame" to far greater responsibilities and delights than anyone then realized. He did not know there would be a great war, nor that the whole world would be involved. He did not know that there would be a peace conference as its aftermath. He did not know that his later life would be involved in that war, and particularly with its peace.

Years passed, as years do, and the little boy grew up and went to Princeton for his collegiate work, where he took his anticipated Sanskrit, as well as Latin and Greek. From there he went to Columbia university, adding a few more languages to his personal curriculum. After Columbia, he was known as Dr. Louis Herbert Gray, and that is the way he is known in Lincoln, where he is associate professor of philosophy at the university.

An interesting and unusual life lies in those years between Columbia and Lincoln, and an early interest has been sustained in all of them. The love of languages that led Dr. Gray as a little boy to want to learn Sanskrit has led him to learn many other languages. At Princeton, carrying a full program each semester, he was compelled to take some of his favorite subject with a tutor. Accordingly, he took Old Church Slavic, Italic dialects, Oscan and Umbrian and Old Prussian. This language was spoken in Prussia before the advent of the Teutons, and has been extinct since the seventeenth century. The only remaining written record is a copy of Martin Luther's catechism. Other courses he took were Persian and Avesta.

Love For the Languages.

He, of course, is easily conversant in the modern foreign languages, Romance, Teutonic, and Greek, much to the amazement of Greek candy shop proprietors. Armenian, Hebrew, Icelandic, Anglo-Saxon, Gothic, Old Irish, and Arabic are just a few of the others he has studied.

Dr. Gray is a comparative philologist. Languages to him are a science. He is interested in them as a surgeon is interested in an operation, technically. Many of the languages have no literature, and in those which have he uses it only as a basis of study, to gain added information on the religion and mythology of the countries represented. Finding some new bit, he enjoys contrasting it with some other of a similar period, but of a different country. Through his studies he has become an authority on religion of all races. He often receives letters from India, requesting information on disputed points in the worship. At one time he gave advice concerning the propriety of substituting flowers for animals in the sacrifice and at another on the proper procedure for a feast when the country's two calendars differ by one month.

Recreation In Books.

A light evening's entertainment for Dr. Gray—while others sleep—is a translation of a poem or two from the Persian or a couple of acts from the season's best in Sanskrit. In 1904, he made the first prose translation from the Persian of the Hundred Love Songs of Kamal Ad-Din of Isfahan, which were made into English verse by Ethel Watts Mumford. He has translated three plays from the Sanskrit, putting them into English verse. "Vasavadatta," a Sanskrit romance by Subandhu, probably one of the six best sellers in ancient India, in translation, is the work of his pen.

Previous to 1913, Dr. Gray had become associate editor of "The Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics," and in that year he went to Aberdeen, Scotland, to carry on the work. His contribution to the encyclopedia would make a large volume in itself. Aberdeen is on the North Sea, and there Dr. Gray was during the early part of the war. Fearing that it might, from its position be subject to attack from the Geerman fleet, the residents lived for months prepared to follow at a moment's notice the "Instructions to Civil Population in the Event of a Hostile Landing." Dr. Gray remained in Aberdeen until 1915, when he returned to America to assume the editorship of "The Mythology of All Races."

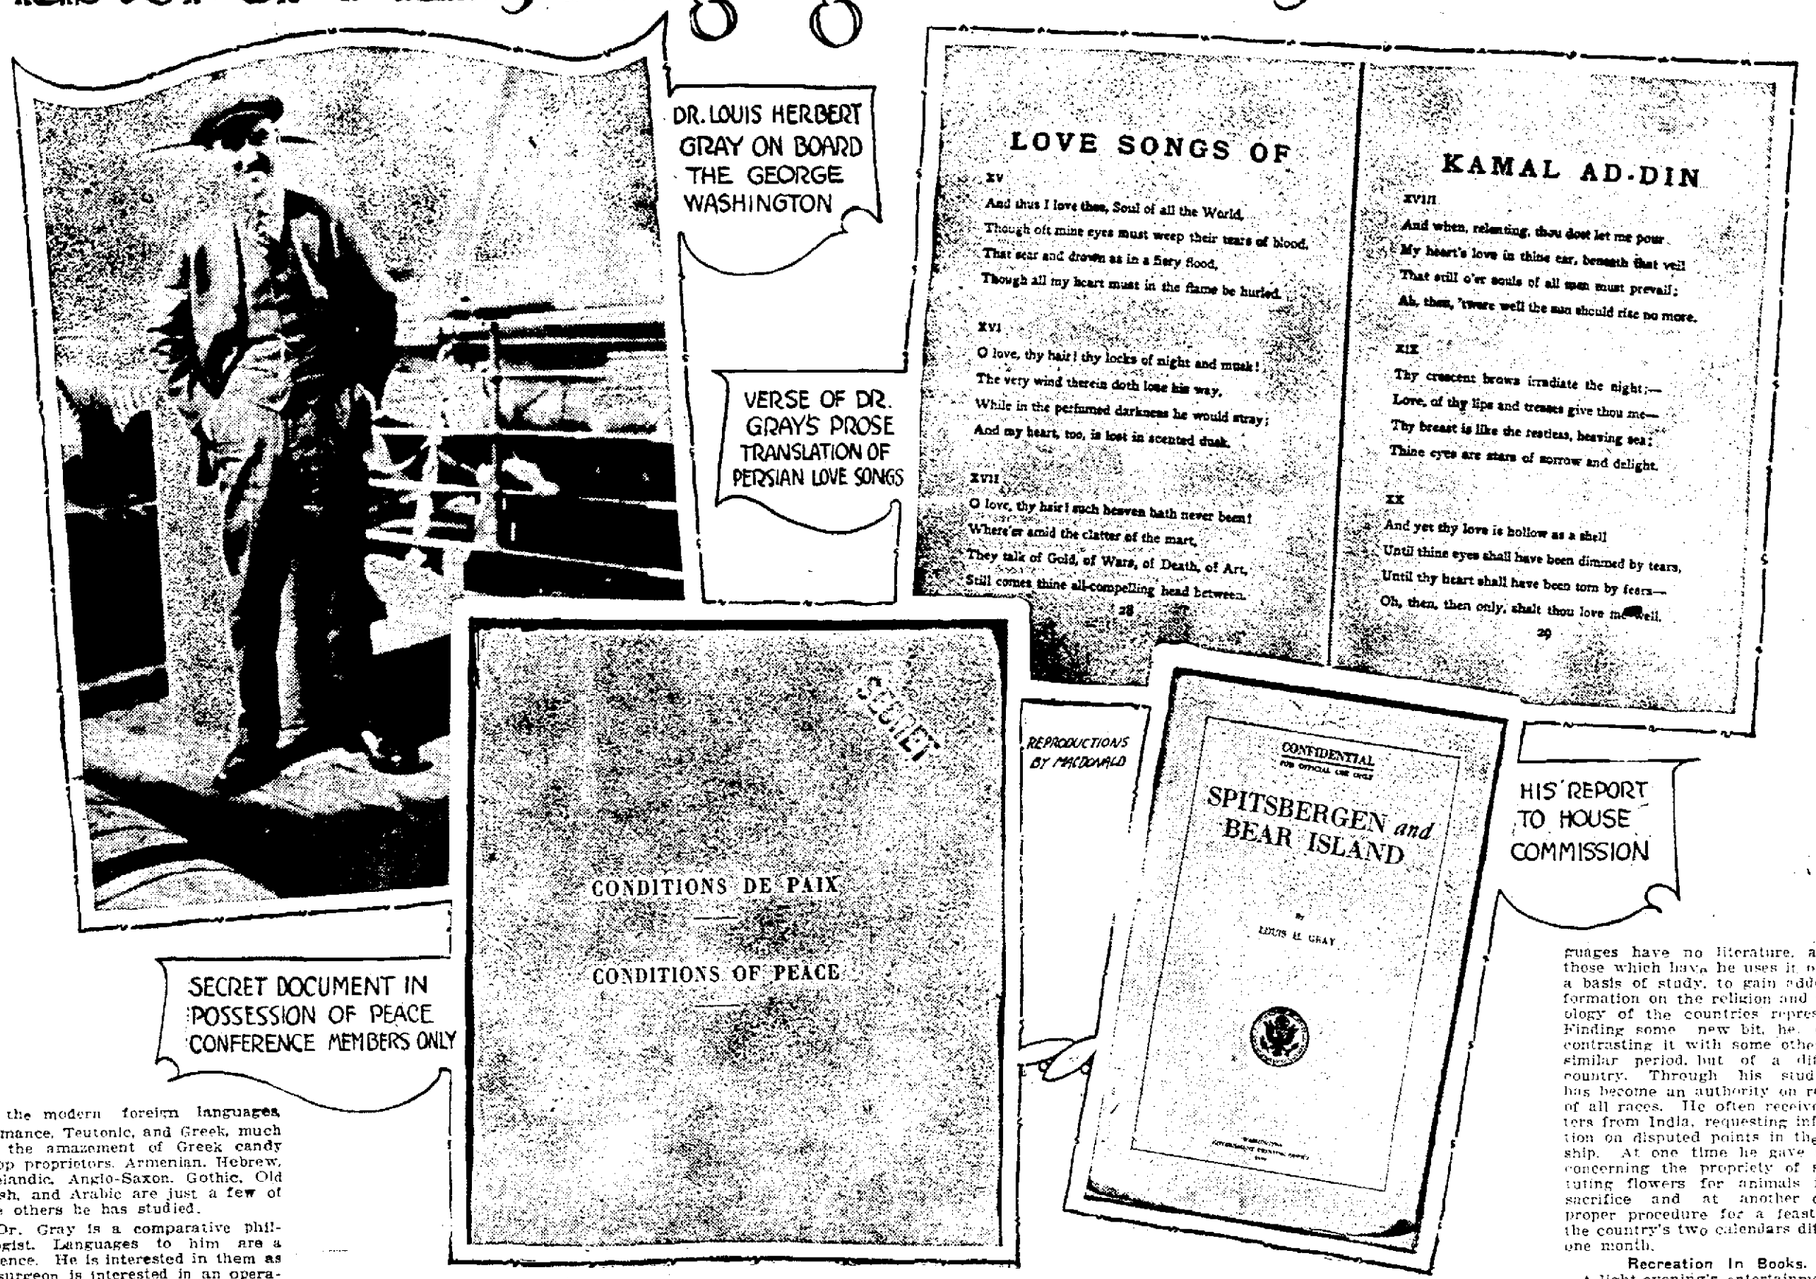

Incidentally, Dr. Gray was in Rotterdam, preparing for a short trip down the Rhine, when Germany declared war on Russia. He was in London when England declared war on Germany, and he gives a very different picture of that night from the one that is generally accepted. Dr. Gray declares that London was not a drunken orgy on that night, and that when the news came to Trafalgar square a pin dropped could have been heard, and the same atmosphere prevailed in all parts of the city.

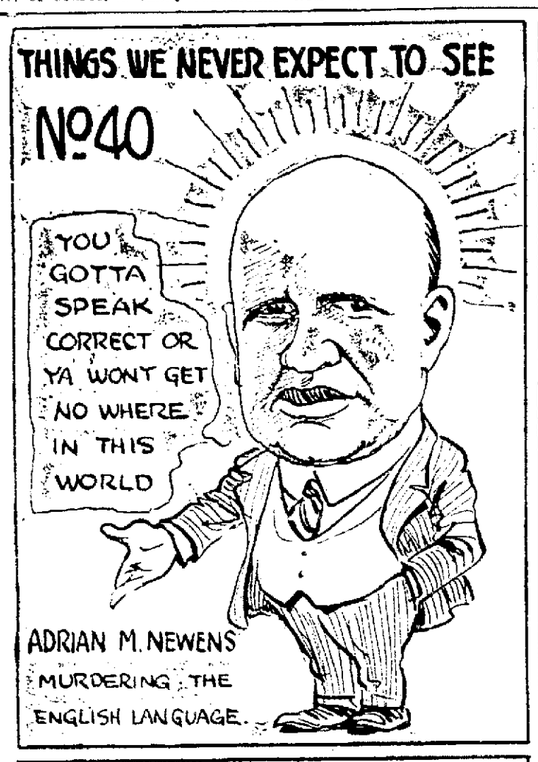

Takes Hand In Conference.

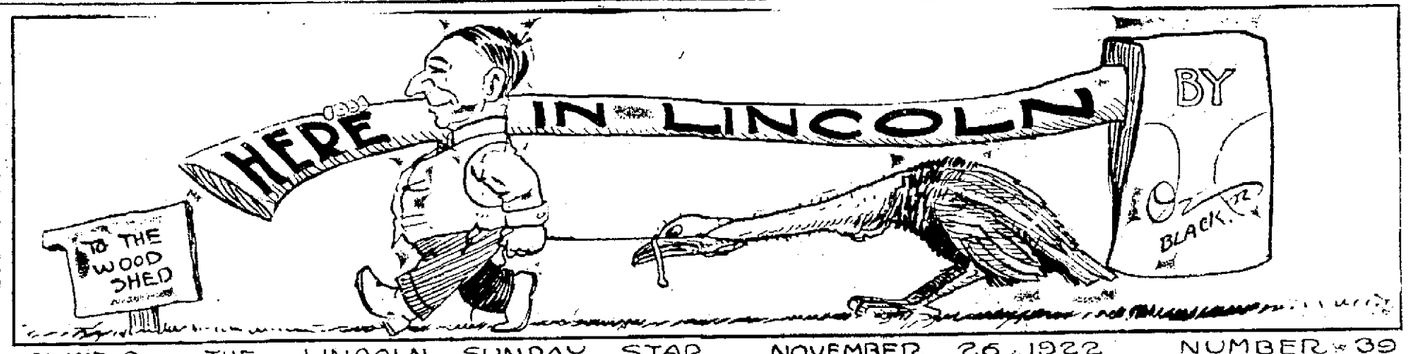

In January, 1918, Dr. Gray was appointed on the House commission, the Inquiry, whose members were preparing data for the expected peace conference. His particular problem was the preparation of a report on all phases and conditions relating to Persia, and incidentally on the possibility of making all of the three months of the Danube river navigable. That latter fact had bearing on the distribution of territory. All work was done with the greatest secrecy, members of Dr. Gray's own family not being acquainted with his duties—nor were they until his arrival in France. Before sailing, he prepared another report on Spitsbergen and Bear Island, which belonged to no country. To know its resources was necessary before it could be given to any one country. His title had been "Expert for Questions Pertaining to Persia and the Near East."

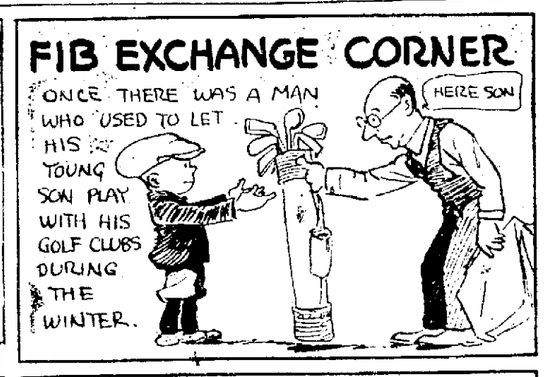

He sailed on the famous George Washington December 3, 1918 and

Poultry Raising Offers Health and a Living to Discouraged, Disabled Men

Government Furnishes Training at Agricultural College for Those Who Find That the Hardships of War Have Wrecked Their Health.

CITIES ARE URGED TO GIVE ENCOURAGEMENT

Bookkeepers, Locomotive Firemen, Farmers and Clerk Are Found in the Lists of Those Who Are Studying Poultry Husbandry.

BY JESSIE WATSON.

The dream of a home and a comfortable living, perhaps a little plot of ground all his own and a garden and fruit trees and chickens, which for many a man seemed shattered by the war has been again made possible for some of them through the training in poultry husbandry which the federal government is providing for disabled war veterans Nebraska's unit at the state agricultural college has about forty-five men in training

These men, representing the honest, wage-earning citizens of the country, were in various lines of work before they joined the army Among them were a few book keepers and other office workers and many more engaged in physical labor A number of them worked on farms some of them owning little piecees of ground of their own Others worked on railroads doing such strenuous work as tiling on a locomotive.

Then the war came and these men enlisted in the service Some of them left wives and homes, others left sweethearts and wondered if their dream of a home would ever come true When they returned, some of them gassed, some of them wounded most of them went back into their former work thinking that in spite of their disability they could make their dreams come true Happy families were reunited Men who had left their sweethearts to go over there married and established homes of their own For others the dream of a home was realized in a reunion with their parents and a comfortable place for them to live together

For a number of these men life didn't look so black when they came back, but in a few months the tragedy came They found their health would not bear up under the strain to them work Those who were engaged in out-of-door work found the physical labor too severe Those who were in offices could not stand confinement either it had a bad effect on their nerves or the lungs were weak and needed more fresh air.

Uphill Struggle

Some of these too proud to ask for help others not knowing just how to apply for aid from the government, struggled along as best they could Even if they were receiving compensation the struggle to make a living was a discouraging one Then some Red Cross worker heard of them and put them in touch with the vocational board They were asked to report for physical examination and later were told that the government could provide vocational training for them

Other got into vocational training in a different way Some were so badly disabled when they returned that they could not thing of resuming their pre-war occupation

Once lined up for vocational training there was the problem of selecting the course In deciding this, a number of things had to be taken into consideration physical ability education personal inclination The advisers presented all the lines of training to the men They described the work that each vocation would require and gave the men an idea of the financial returns they could expect The poultry business seemed especially suitable for the men and gave the men who could not do inside work and could not stand hard physical labor and who did not have the advantages of higher education. Most of the men who became interested in poultry had a grade school education and a few had a year or two of high school training Only married men were encouraged to take up the poultry business One important consideration which the adviser never overlooked was whether the man's wife would be satisfied on a poultry farm When everything seemed satisfactory the men were told to think the matter over a few days before they made their final decision They were told to go out to the agricultural college and see the poultry plant and talk with the men taking the training. After they had gone this far their decision was usually to take the training in the poultry department

This vocation has much in its favor It takes a man outdoors, and yet it is comparatively light work. Fruit-growing gardening or dairying is usually carried on in connection with the chicken farm The combination brings in a comfortable living and, while it requires many hours of hard work, it is so arranged that a man who would not be able to go straight through an ordinary day of work can put in his eight or ten hours a day

Practically all the men, those who have completed the course and gone out on poultry farms and those who are still in training, seem satisfied Among those who are operating farms for themselves are Rudolph Autitt at Beatrice who expects to develop the hatchery business C H Brubaker at Lexington, who completed the course about six weeks ago Hialmar Halberg and Frank E Rice who have been established at Plattsmouth for two or three months Wm E Hurd at Council Bluffs and others A. L Baker is raising single-comb white Leghorn chickens on a ten-acre farm near Burnham and taking his training at the same time Before the war he lived on a homestead in the western part of the state. He enlisted in the army in May, 1917, and was sent to France about a year later He received his discharge Sept 4 1919 He then sold his homestead and bought the little farm near Burnham where he and his parents make their home At first he did general farming on his little plot and kept a team of horses, a few pigs, three milk cows and a few chickens. Last spring he decided to convert his place into the "Yankee Hill Poultry Farm' and at about the same time he began to take the vocational work in poultry husbandry He enlarged his poultry house and hatched his own chickens He now has about 300 pullets He figures that each hen will net from $2 to $4 a year

One Enthusiast.

One of the most enthusiastic poultry rusers is Ralph Proffitt, who with his wife and little daughter Anita, lives at 455 Woodland street, Bethany He has his place leased for four years and is doing gardening as well, is raising chickens. He has a splendid location and hopes to buy the place when the leasee expires If he buys the place he will set most of the ground in fruit trees. Mr. Proffitt is building his business on a firm foundation He sells eggs to private customers on a contract and makes a regular delivery route He also sells dressed chickens to these customers. They are willing to pay a better price for his products than they would have to pay on the regular market He says that he lets his customers do his advertising, they like his products and tell their friends about them

Mr. Proffitt has 280 hens housed in an up-to-date chicken house measuring 20 by 40 feet. It is built largely on plans worked out at the agricultural college, which include a scientific lighting and ventilating system. He is experimenting on certain details of the equipment which he thought he could improve and the results are very gratifying. He completed his training course last August, but he is still in close touch with the vocational training department. The men who take poultry work are in school about a year, and their projects are under the supervision of the department in a general way for another year They were supposed to receive their vocational training pay for two years, for without this money many of them would be unable to equip and stock a chicken farm even in a very small way. Now, when some of the men have completed the year of training, their checks have been cut down and as a result they are finding it rather difficult to establish themselves in the poultry business

Capital is Chief Difficulty.

The capital required to get started is the most serious problem that the men have to face There are very few positions open to poultry experts and it takes money to start into business for oneself. A plot of five or ten acres is about the right size, and there are very few of thesee to be rented for more than a year at a time. A lease of at least three or five years is necessary, because a man could not afford to put up buildings only to tear them down or move them in a year The ideal way to do is to get a long lease and they buy the ground when the lease expires Some of the men have combed the state pretty thoroughly to find a desirable location that can be leased for several years, but have had discouraging results.

One of the men went to a Nebraska town recently and thought that he would talk with business men about his project—the opportunities the town offered and the probability of procuring a desirable location—before he went to a real estate dealer He went into one bank and received the curt reply that there was a real estate dealer up the street He went into a second bank and received the same reply

In striking contrast to this is the experience of one of the men who wrote to the Chamber of Commerce at Central City before going there He received a cordial letter pointing out the advantages of the town and inviting him to come and look it over He went there and was the guest of Chamber of Commerce at a dinner The business men realized that he would be an asset and tried to "sell" the town to him

This is the attitude that the vocational training officials would like for all the towns to take toward the men who have sacrificed the best of their lives for their country and are now struggling to be useful, self-supporting citizens In nearly every instance it would be a distinct asset to a town to have a trained poultryman locate there He would furnish the town with high grade products and in addition to this he would serve as expert advisor to other poultry raisers. He would take the place of a county agent where poultry was concerned, and this is a line of work in which very few county agents are trained

If towns could only realize two things, that a trained poultryman would be an asset and that it is their duty to help disabled veterans become rehabilitated more of them would take the attitude of Central City.

As it is some of the men who will complete the course soon have their plans definitely made but a number of them are still at sea.

W. J. Urkitz thought he was settled He had a good eleven-acre farm at Nebraska City leased and understood that it would not be sold. But a few weeks after he leased it the farm was sold He could have held it for one year, but as it would not be profitable to hold the place so short a time he gave it up. Since then he has been looking for either a farm or a position

What a Lincoln Physician Says About Shogo-Lithia Mineral Water

Lincoln, Nebr., April 26, 1922.

After an exhaustive analysis by skilled chemists Shogo Lithia water has been shown to contain several elementary salts of usefulness—the principal ones being the salts of Potassium, Sodium, Magnesium and Calcium with sprinklings of Iron, Aluminum and Lithium.

It is at once apparent to those familiar with such matters that the ingredients of Shogo Lithia are similar to those of many well and favorably known European mineral waters.

Its effect on human ailments naturally would be that of its known ingredients.

It follows therefore that Shogo Lithia water exerts a beneficial effect on at least two emunctories (the principal ones) of the human body—the stomach and intestinal and the kidney and urinary tracts.

A group of songs was given by the Electa ladies' quartet composed of Mesdames Mitchell, Andrews, Boyles and Baer. The evening was concluded with dancing and social hour. There were nearly 600 in attendance.

Lancaster lodge No. 54, A. F. & A. M., had its sixth annual Past Masters' day at the Masonic temple, 236 South Eleventh street, Friday, beginning at one o'clock p. m.

After the lodge was opened by the regular officers the work was turned over to the Past Masters' association when the degree of a Master Mason was conferred on five candidates, all the work was given by the Past Masters of Lancaster lodge No. 54.

Past Grand Master O. J. King, the present Master of the association being absent, Past Grand Master, Samuel S. Whiting, present warden of the association took charge. Fifteen of the past masters were present and participate in the work. Past masters of other lodges had been invited as guests of honor and many were present, representing practically every Masonic lodge in the county. Each past master was given a white rose thus distinguishing the wearer as a past master. The candidates receiving the degrees were, Dr. Roy B. Adams, Chelsie T. Johnson, Clarence M. Stewart, Irving R. Dana and Albert B. Falhauber.

At 6:15 all repaired to the banquet room when dinner was served to a large assembly occupying practically the seating capacity of the banquet room. Past Grand Master Samuel S. Whiting acted as toastmaster and after reviewing briefly the history of Lancaster lodge No. 54, introduced Paster Master Mark E. Vance as the first speaker by telling a few open secrets about him. Mr. Vance spoke largely on the service side of masonry and dwelt at some length on the service to the lodge of the late Past Master Robert O. Wolf. The Electra quartet consisting of Mrs. Orville Andrews, Mrs. Louise M. Mitchell, Mrs. Gertrude Boyels and Mrs. E. M. Baer was introduced and so pleased the company that they were compelled to respond to many encores. The ladies was presented with handsome bouquets by the toastmaster. Past master, J. S. Baer was introduced as the next speaker with many facetious references to his civil status. Mr. Baer spoke on the subject "Watchman what of the Day" using Hawthorne's intelligence office as the basis of his remarks.

The company then returned to the lodge room where moving pictures of the laying of the corner stone of the Masonic Children's home of Fremont were presented by the courtesy of Dr. Geo. Condra's department at the university, after which the remainder of the initiatory work was done. The Past Masters wore their Prince Albert suits and Past masters jewels whiles the regular officers wore evening suits and acted as a reception committee for the occasion.

DRASTIC SPEED LAWS NEEDED.

Arguments in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic were that it was a breeder of crime and that it led to physical violence. These same arguments can be made against the automobile as it is used today by all too many people. Not a day passes that the newspapers do not contain stories of numerous frightful accidents, due in almost every instance to a violation of the law upon the part of some person or persons.

The automobile is at this time reaping a greater toll of killed and maimed than any other agency extant and notwithstanding the terrible record being made there is no apparent tendency upon the part of drivers to curb their recklessness. Regard for the rights of others seems to have no place in the makeup of some car owners or chauffeurs, who are concerned only in escaping the penalty for flagrant violations of the statutes and ordinances.

This condition prevails not only in Lincoln and Nebraska, but all over the country and presents a problem which is taxing the resourcefulness of law enforcement officers and judges everywhere. It has come to be quite generally agreed that the mere infliction of fines is no deterrent. Some people with more money than anything else have affected to consider it a huge joke to be hooked and fined for speeding and even while reading of sickening tragedies, due to the recklessness of irresponsible persons one might glance about and see other speed maniacs dashing down crowded thoroughfares as though there were no others on earth.

One judge in an eastern city a few days ago sentenced a number of speeders who had been arrested to go through a hospital and view the many maimed and suffering children who were there because of automobile accidents. This naturally had an effect upon some of the offenders, but not all. In Los Angeles last Monday, one judge sent twenty-six speeders to jail for periods ranging from three to forty days. In three days he pronounced jail sentences against fifty such culprits.

In some cities a variety of penalties are now provided, the judge using his discretion in each individual case. One plan which has met with apparent favor is to license all drivers of cars and to deprive one of such license for varying periods, depending upon the seriousness of his or her offense. Cars are also impounded for different lengths of time and may even be confiscated.

It is generally agreed that fining is no deterrent to violations of the traffic laws and that more severe penalties must be applied. The general public will sustain officials in the strict enforcement of these enactments, no matter how drastic they may be made. The slaughter of the innocents must cease and the way to stop it is to make speeding unpopular. It is as much the duty of a law abiding citizen to report violations of the speed laws as it is to inform against one who commits larceny or forgery.

THE RICHEST MINES.

It is interesting to observe that in an Engineering Journal an article listing the "six greatest" mining project in the world, only one gold mine and no diamond or silver mines are named. Three copper mines, one iron and one sulphur mine are named, only two of them in the United States.

The list as given includes the Utah Copper company in Bingham canyon, Utah, a low grade copper mine operated by steam shovels; The Chile Copper company, a huge project which employs the leaching process to secure ore; the copper mines of the Union Miniere du Haut Katanga, in the heart of Africa where great difficulties were encountered in the building.

The sulphur mines in Louisiana and Texas where superheated steam is forced into the deep sulphur beds, melting the sulphur which is pumped to the surface, are among the world's greatest projects. The iron mines in the Mesabi range are open pit mines where more material is to be moved than was necessary in the digging of the Panama canal. The last of the list of six is the gold mines of the Rand in South Africa where gold is brought to the surface from more than a mile below ground.

HIGHER PRICES FOR FARM PRODUCTS.

There are sound reasons why the present Thanksgiving day should be a day of real thanksgiving. Originated to give thanks for an abundant harvest, the day has been set aside for a similar purpose in both "lean" and "full" years but in 1922, according to figures given by the "Manufacturers' Record," the abundance is here and with it the promise of returning prosperity.

These figures show that the value of crops in this country is $1,500,000,000 greater in 1922 tha in 1921. The November 1, value placed on the twenty principal crops in the country was $6,668,000,000 and the month has seen an increase in these values of close to $150,000,000. The total 1921 crop value was $5,302,000,000.

The return to better times has been more rapid in the southern states than elsewhere due largely to the mounting price for cotton. But every section of the country has felt the encouragement offered by advancing prices of all staple crops. In the list of twenty crops the only ones showing decrease in production from 1921 are corn, buckwheat, sugar beets, kafirs and peanuts. The higher prices in most instances more than offset the short crops.

Taking the country as a whole there is real reason for Thanksgiving.

One of a mathematical turn of mind has determined that it will require ten freight cars to bring to Lincoln the material required for the wiring of the new state house. There is to be 80,000 feet, or 15 miles of conduit, which will furnish a safety protection and insulation for 150,000 feet, or 29 miles of wire, which will also be insulated. The copper wire will weigh more than a thousand tons and the rubber and fabric will weigh over three tons. Exclusive of wiring for elevators and lifts, the material for electric wiring will weight close to 1,000,000 pounds and there are a million pieces of material to handle. That gives a rather graphic picture of the undertaking represented by the building of the new Nebraska capitol.

INDICATIONS OF A GROWING CITY

Those interested in the progress of Lincoln may feel justifiably proud of the record of the last two years. For Lincoln is growing—a substantial growth—which augurs well for the future and the realization of the dream that within ten years the capital city of Nebraska will boast of a hundred thousand citizens.

That mark of 100,000 population for Lincoln represents the ambition of Lincoln Chamber of Commerce. Just how near it is to being realized in 1922 can better be appreciated by the reproduction of the following excerpt from the new Lincoln city directory, which came from the press this week:

"The estimate of population based on the number of names appearing in the directory is of interest to the public for the reason that it represents conclusive arrived at based upon the results obtained by thoroughly drilled and experienced canvassers. Lincoln has reason to be proud of its steady, permanent and continuous growth; its unrivalled business establishments; its educational facilities which are excelled nowhere; and the earnestness and progressiveness of its citizenship.

"This volume contains 41,464 names which multiplied by 2¼ to represent married women and children not included in this enumeration indicates a population of 93,044 for Lincoln at the present time. This includes the suburbs of Bethany, College View, Havelock and University Place, which are not within the corporate limits of the city of Lincoln but for all practical purposes are part of the city."

The procedure followed by those in charge of the directory to estimate the present population of Lincoln and its suburbs involves the same methods used by experts throughout the country. The indisputable facts reveal that Lincoln today is only a few thousand short of the hundred thousand mark.

One need not look alone to the directory for the evidence of Lincoln's steady and substantial progress.

The increase in attendance at the public schools of this city in the last ten years reflects an increasing population for Lincoln that exceeds the most sanguine hopes. In 1912, or just ten years ago the total attendance in the public schools, both grammer and high, was 8,856, with 1,163 registered inthe high school and 7,693 in the grades. In 1921-22, or ten years later, the total attendance had jumped to 12,730—an increase of 50 per cent. In the high school 2,423 students registered, and 9,517 in the grades. So far in the present year there has been an increase in attendance of 618 over the same month a year ago. This school attendance can be interpreted in only one way—it is explained by the presence of more families in Lincoln. Children of this age do not attend school away from home.

The same situation is revealed in the growth of the state university, of Wesleyan, of Cotner, of Union college and the other educational institutions in this city and the neighboring suburbs.

Nor do the schools alone furnish proof of Lincoln's growth. Within the last year the municipal water department has made connections with 611 new homes. The same situation is revealed in the installation of new telephones, gas and electric light. In the postal service, the carrier routes reflect this growth.

More convincing is the building for the first ten months of 1922, the greatest period of building in the history of the city of Lincoln. During those ten months an even 1,000 building permits have been issued by the city engineer, of which 396 were for residences. The aggregate total of these building operations is the largest in the city's history. With all of this activity in the building of new homes, one need only to start in quest of desirable residential property to discover that the demand for homes in Lincoln is still far greater than the supply and the city is still months behind its actual building needs. That means only one thing. It means there has been a growth in the city's population outstripping the building activities. When it is considered that Lincoln in the last two years has stood well up to the top in the statistics for building among middle west cities, there is due cause for optimism.

It doesn't require a super-optimist to take pride in Lincoln's development in the last few years, and it does not require extraordinary vision to forsee that this city is now entering upon a period of splendid development.

Not many months ago the regents of the state university met with the architect of that institution to consider the building program. It is a significant fact that one of the Omaha members of the board estimated a university of 20,000 students within the next fifteen years.

In this connection, it is apparent that the new stadium, construction of which is to start within a few months, is not fully appreciated. The stadium is not to be devoted solely to athletics. It will serve the state for enterprises of a various nature. It will provide the setting for great pageants and other civic enterprises in which Nebraska as a state will participate.

Nebraska has started to build a magnificent $5,000,000 capitol—representing as it does, one of the finest buildings of its type to be found in America.

Lincoln is the greatest retail center for its population in America. It will continue to be so. If the hope of cheap electric power is realized by contemplated power developments on the fast flowing streams of Nebraska, it may develop into a great industrial center, manufacturing here at home the articles made out of the raw products produced in this section.

The prosperity and advancement of Lincoln and Nebraska is not subject to whims. This state is a part of the great bread basket of the world, devoted to the feeding and clothing of mankind.

The federal reserve bank of Kansas City is directing attention to the chinch bug situation in Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Texas, resulting in a damage last year of $45,000,000. Entomologists point out, the Reserve bank bulletin points out, that a winter campaign against the chinch bug will save millions for the farmers of this section in the next year. "Whenever the bugs have caused injury during the preceding season, 98 per cent of them will be found hiberating in the clump forming grasses, such as bunch grass and blue stem, in meadows, pastures and ravines and waste places along roadsides. In clump forming grasses if there is an average of from twelve to fifteen bugs to the clump then the grasses should be burned. The best time to destroy chinch bugs is in November or December."

All Nations Blindly Groping About For Leader to Show them Way Out of the Present Impending Crises

SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Has anybody got any plan for the future? Is there any statesman in the world or any group of men or any individual anywhere who can offer a hopeful and practical policy by means of which world trade may be revived and Europe restored? The extraordinary thing about the recent election in Great Britain was the absence of any policy whatever ever vaguely suggested by those who offered to govern the country in place of Lloyd George's Coalition with the exception of the Labor party, which offered to ruin it.

I read large numbers of election speeches by Lloyd-George, Bonar Law, Winston Churchill ad others of less note but in no single one of them could I find any definite scheme outlined to which the people might cling with some kind of hope in its chances of success.

The Labor party in its original manifesto proposed a national levy on all incomes above five thousand pounds to be used for cancellation of the national debt, but they dropped it like hot cinders when business men of all classes pointed out its absurdity and the disastrous results it would have on national credit, industry and progress. Yet I am bound to say that it held a place in the popular imagination as the only plan, good or bad, almost certainly bad, offered to the electors. Otherwise they were put off with such unsatisfying promises as tranquility, closer friendship with the allies, and strict economy.

Some of the Unexplained.

It was not explained how tranquility was to be obtained at a time when Turkey was threatening a new war, when food riots were gathering force in Germany, and when unemployment were unrelieved in England. Nor did these politicians reveal any secret discovery by which France would be made more friendly to Great Britain without our sacrificing all hopes of European recovery and British trade. As for economy, there were no guess given by which taxation could be relieved or revenue increased.

The truth is that the new British government, like the last, will improvise some kind of policy as it goes along in order to tide over the trouble while they may, and so far has not clear cut philosophy, no definite plan to secure an approach to prosperity at home and security abroad. They are conscious of the dangers crowding up and the ruin more deeply entrenched in Europe but how to remedy this state of affairs they seem to have no more than a blurred vision and infinite perplexity.

All Nations Floundering.

The same lack of plan is visible in other countries. The United States after the recent elections as indeed before has shown no strong leadership or clear guidance in world affairs, and seems to be floundering in her own sea of troubles. Germany is merely struggling with desperation to escape not only the penalties of defeat but the consequences of financial madness which possessed her when she let her printing presses race the downfall of marks.

Certain French statesmen have more logical plans and have thought out their problem in a scientific spirit, but that logic is merely a tragic conviction that the safety of France by the economic destruction of Germany may be a better alternative than the industrial revival of Europe with Germany leading and France menaced. Anyhow there is no program of policy or practical ideal held up before the heavily burdened peoples which may rally their enthusiasm or even appeal to their hopes of betterment. There is no leadership which might enlist advanced and courageous minds ready to put even self interest on one side in order to give the world a chance.

This negative spirit in public affairs is responsible for a policy of drift which is highly dangerous, for there are strong currents and tides of passion moving below the surface of European life. The patience of the peoples is breaking down after four years of disillusionment and increasing poverty. International communists and anarchists of all brands are busy everywhere preaching the gospel of war against capital, confiscation of private property and a general revolution of labor.

Those British Elections.

The British elections proved that such propaganda has had very little effect so far in countries like England still true to old traditions of order and moderation, but it is undoubtedly making headway in Germany because of social distress and national despair. For some time I believe there will be a reaction, perhaps even harsh and brutal reaction, but that will be no remedy and will only embitter the conflicts that will follow as sure as fate unless unemployed men get work, unless hungry people get bread and unless there is some real relief to the strangle hold of taxation and distress.

What are the intellectuals doing? What is youth doing after all our hopes? Who is thinking out any plan by means of which we may get comfort for our souls and some good promise? In Germany on a recent visit I found a new kind of philosophy in vogue among the intellectual crowd which has been hardest hit by rising prices and falling marks. It is a kind of mediaeval resignation to poverty. As Francis of Assis I found some strange joy in the uttermost misery and wooed My Lady Poverty with the passion of a lover, so these young German painters and musicians and poets are founding a new cult which has poverty as its ideal, because they believe it will liberate the artistic and spiritual nature of their race from that gross materialism which imprisoned it.

Lesson From Art.

I had a letter from a leading art critic in Germany in which he expresses pity for England because she is still absorbed in material interests, responsibilities of Empire, economic ambitions. "We are luckier in Germany," he wrote, "because we are ruined, broken as a military power, and forced to go without all the luxuries of life unless we happen to be profiteers or gamblers in foreign exchanges. It is astonishing how the men and women of my class are turning to beauty as life's best gift and scorning the old fleshpots. By limiting one's desires one liberates one's soul."

Doubtless this cult is spreading in Germany. But it is not widespread and outside the artist class poverty has few compensations to satisfy people who go hungry and ill clad. In England there is no such conscious cult of poverty, but there is some tendency among the aristocratic and intellectual classes to limit their necessities and to withdraw into some little private paradise, cheap and pleasant, and secure whatever happens.

Lloyd-George expressed that idea when he told an audience recently that he had built a country cottage with a garden in which he was planting flowers so small that even if a revolution came nobody would think it worth while to dispossess him or take the roof from his head. Many people have done the same thing, and I am one of them, but we are lucky people who can afford to buy this little private paradise; and there are many who cannot and who will not be satisfied with that philosophy of waiting resignedly for the worst to happen. There must be a plan. There must be a policy. Europe and the world must not be allowed to drift further towards the rocks.

Gibbs Suggests Way Out.

I am not audacious enough to think that I hold the key to this plan, but I think I do see a groping way, like some others, certain elementary and practical steps that might be taken and indeed must be taken before there can be any progress. First of all steps is the demobilization of the great standing armies in Europe which are an immense burden and a great drain of wealth. That can never happen as long as Russia and Poland stand in arms against each other and as long as France keeps her only weapon to coerce Germany on account of reparations. Russia could long ago have been induced to demobilize in return for economic aid on drastic conditions, provided Poland were also demobilized. An agreement between France, Germany, Great Britain and the United States on business lines and with absolute guarantees could bring Russia back as a world market for manufactured goods and as the granary of Central Europe. Somehow or other it must be done.

Secondly, Germany must be let off the greater part of her indemnities on condition that she provide materials to restore northern France and reform her internal finance. France will only agree to that on two conditions: The first is absolute guarantees by Great Britain of military aid in case of German aggression and the second is cancellation of all her debts. The second must be granted. In lieu of that first condition which would be resisted by public opinion in the British empire there must be some international guarantee backed by the league of nations for the safety of France from further invasion. The menace of east against west must be faced, not only by Great Britain but by the western nations pledged to mutual support for the sake of world peace, and for that pact Great Britain must yield some of her privileges and responsibilities in Mesopotama, Palestine and Persia to the great relief of British taxpayers.

Need for State Aid.

Unemployment in England and other countries must be eased by state aided schemes of emigration, by industrial insurance and by a revival of European trade, made possible by those new agreements. European debts to America must be paid in the hope and belief that the United States would co-operate more closely in world settlement, and help to guarantee world peace.

Lastly, the danger of revolution in Europe must b averted by the pressure of Liberal opinion insisting upon a living wage; for labor, enlarging opportunities of workers for a share in the control of their own industries, and narrowing the gulf between great wealth and great poverty. There, crudely and badly, is a practical program which is the minimum of what European peoples need and demand. There is no other escape from present evils. Sooner or later those things must be done, so why not make a start and get to work and find a leader strong enough, honest enough, big enough, to get the world behind him for that achievement?

"Wet Gold" or Alaska's Fishing Industry Source of Great Wealth

(Copyrighted by Chicago Tribune.)

BY BOB BECKER.

Article 6.

Alaska has two kinds of gold. One is the yellow gold that comes from the quartz mines and placer fields. Then there is another kind—wet gold from the Pacific ocean and by that the fishermen mean Alaska's enormous yield from fishing, as forty to fifty million dollars worth of fish are taken from Alaskan waters every year. In view of this income derived from the fishing industry of the territory it is not surprising that the millions of pounds of salmon, herring, cod and halibut sold each year are called wet gold.

Along the coast the work of gathering in this harvest from the Pacific gives employment to hundreds of men and often is the only reason for the existence of some of the smaller towns. During the fishing season fleets of gasboats equipped to handle the large hauls of salmon or the big catches of halibut ply up and down the coast of Alaska to return from the seining or the trolling grounds to the towns or canneries where their catch can be disposed of.

In 1920 it is estimated that fishermen in Alaskan waters received $12,000,000 for their labor and the money spent for supplies during a season is no small item in the business of the towns which outfit fishermen.

The canning of salmon is the biggest fish business in Alaska today. The waters of the territory are blessed with several species of this valuable foor fish and in 1920 alone the value of salmon canned in Alaskan water was more than $35,000,000. At the head of the list of salmon that fishermen go after is the king salmon. This handsome fish which will attain a size of thirty forty or fifty pounds is in great demand and aside from its commercial value, it furnishes plenty of sport when taken on a single hook. Then there is the silver or coho, the sockeye or red salmon as it is known to the trade, the humpback or pink and the chum salmon, all of which are valuable food fish. These come in from the sea to spawn and as they follow along the shore line trying to find a freshwater stream in which they can spawn they are caught by the thousands. Those that get by the traps placed along the shores are taken near the mouths of the streams up which the fish are trying to go. As the fish mill about at the mouth of stream before ascending they are preyed upon by gulls and eagles. After they get up the creek and the eggs are laid the trout descend ravenously upon the nests and devour eggs by the thousands. Bears also take their toll. Both the brown bear and the black bear are fond of fish and during the summer they live almost all of the time near a salmon stream where they can gorge upon the fresh fish. While these natural enemies are preying upon the salmon man is seining and trapping them by the thousands for canning purposes and it is one of the wonders of the North and that the fish have kept their numbers as they have in the past.

Next in importance to the salmon industry is the halibut fishing. This is a far different type of fishing, as halibut are taken mostly on set lines which are put down deep over the halibut banks. The gear is heavy difficult to handle and the work of hauling in 75 or 100 pound fish in a heavy sea is not easy. Although the customs reports show that about 15,000,000 pounds of halibut are caught on the average each year, it is likely that the amount of halibut caught is nearer 25,000,000 pounds. Exact information is lacking as some of the fishermen are reluctant to state definitely just what localities produced the halibut.

Probably the fastest growing fishing industry in Alaska is the herring packing business. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been invested recently in plants to put up herring by the Scotch cure method. The Alaska herring are claimed to be as good as the Norwegian fish of that species and there is a good market for them. During the past season thousands of barrels were shipped from Alaska to Seattle, the bulk of the output being packed in western Alaska.

Here and There

BATHTUBS STRONGLY OPPOSED.

The more one thinks of the bathtub, the larger the subject looms.

The bathtub is probably the most characteristic mark of modern civilization.

Although the ancient Greeks and Romans bathed a good deal, the triumph of Christianity in Europe was a triumph of the great unwashed.

Medievalism knew no bathtubs.

And for that matter, a great part of modern Europe knows no bathtubs.

You can rent a palace in Rome, or a magnificent mansion in Paris, and while you live surrounded by every conceivable sort of luxurious tapestry and carving you will be compelled, if you want to cleanse your body, to bathe standing up. And if you want warm water, to ring a bell and have it brought from the kitchen.

As a rule, bathtubs in Europe are found along the path beaten by Americans.

But it is only a short time ago, comparatively speaking, that bathtubs came to the United States. Our great-grandfathers did not have them.

According to the American Architect, the first bathtub was installed in the United States in Cincinnati Ohio, on Dec. 20, 1842, by Adam Thompson. He exhibited and explained it at a Christmas party, and four years later took a plunge. The next day the newspapers designated it as an epicurean luxury, and called it undemocratic.

In 1843 the Philadelphia common council considered an ordinance prohibiting bathing between Nov. 1 and March 15, and this ordinance failed of passage, but by two votes.

During the same year the legislature of Virginia laid a tax of $30 a year on every bathtub that might be set up.

In Hartford, Providence, Charleston and Wilmington special and very heavy water rates were charged to persons who had bathtubs.

Boston, in 1845, made bathing unlawful, except on medical advice.—Seattle Post Intelligencer.

EMERSON WAS RIGHT.

In a saying variously quoted Ralph Waldo Emerson expressed his belief that if you did something anything, better than anyone else, the world would make a beaten path to your door. That remark has long been sneered at by the realists; it seems odd no one of them ever thought of checking it up by the postoffice returns. Try that and you will find that Emerson was right.

There is practically no mining of any sort in New England and fuse to set off high explosives is an essential tool in that art. But nearly all the mining fuse used in our country is made in a little Connecticut village. If you raise poultry and equip yourself with the needed implements, yo will probably order them from Cedarvale, Kas. No modern barn is really fitted to house blooded stock unless you have equipped it from a crossroads burg in Iowa, the name of which we cannot recall. The biggest optical glass business is up in the hills of southern Massachusetts at the end of a jerkwater branch line. So it goes.

It has long been a commonplace of baseball that the big men come from the little towns. Speaker, Cobb, Mathewson, Johnson and others—Grantland Rice has developed this theme a score of times, and the truth of it holds for other lines of athletics also. A metropolitan champion is about as rare as a metropolitan statesman. The larger cities simply do not grow them. Theodore Roosevelt was almost alone in his class as a New Yorker.

Everybody know about those great surgeons, the Mayo brothers, sons of a country doctor in Minnesota, who made their village a world center for students of healing. Not everybody knows that practically all the big New York bankers were once village boys.

Spot a person who can do something and you'll find a native from somewhere up the creek where there was room to be oneself. And a lot of them are still there, or their work is, doing the thing better than anyone else does it.—Collier's Weekly.

The beginning of a perfect even as is a decision to let the supper dishes wait until morning.

The greatest service that could be rendered the Christian peoples would be to convert them to Christianity.

HOMER BALMY TAKES PEN IN HAND
By L. H. Robbins

Baseball Mobs and Manners.

Commissioner K. M. Landis,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Judge:

I expect you have inquired every which way to find out who the brave young man was who rushed to your side to save you from the mob and had himself clubbed by mistake in your behalf, that sad day lasts month at the Polo Grounds.

Well, sir, I now can let you know. After this long delay as I am out of the hospital at last, although my head is still pretty sore, you will be thankful to hear.

When I went to witness the second game of the world's series little did I suspicion that I was going to be the hero of the fatal occasion. We never can tell when golden opportunity will push our door bell, do we?

There I sat innocently enjoying myself in back of right field in the tenth inning, with the Yankees and the Giants a neck and neck tie, and plenty of sunlight and peanuts left, when all of a sudden, to my surprise, the empires called the game on account of it going to be dark in a few hours.

Words fail to describe the pandemonium that ensued. You do not need to have it described to you, anyway Judge. You were right there in the middle of it, coming across the field surrounded by a cordon of cops and 30,000 enraging spectators.

Thank fortune, you had at least one friend in the maddened throng, sir. I said to those nearest me, "Shame on you, forgetting your manners in this manner! Shame on you for shoving a fine judge who once sentenced an oil company to $29,000,000! Stand back and give him the air!" I nobly shouted.

Then, if you remember, sir, I turned to you and somewhat in a hurry asked you what was the idea of the empires stopping the game so early.

In the uproar I spoke those words to you in a slightly excited and loud tone, perhaps. But you can see that I simply wished you to tell me the exact official reason why the game had petered out on us, so that I could argue with the frenzied fans for you and reply to their unfeeling criticisms.

Alas! your cop escorts did not understand my pure motives. At least, I presume it was a cop that hit me.

Supposing a young man of intelligence and high principles like myself was paid a regular salary to sit behind the plate at our various games.

It is a painful thing to be misunderstood, especially by the police, Judge.

However, sir, I have now recovered from being so badly cracked, and you have temporarily cooled the fans for the time being by setting aside the gate receipts of that day for charity. So now let us glance forwards to what is ahead of us in the future.

The baseball commission business certainly looks like a bed of rose bushes to me, Mr. Landis. One minute everybody is lifting their voices as well as hats in your Honor's honor, or you are being photographed or, or you are being photographed with General Pershing, and the very next day see what happened last month.

You give our masses a pure sport and they run mass plays over you. Nobody knows when the rooters will turn rioters and turn on you like a thousand of brick. I do not blame a high commissioner of baseball for needing almost as much annual salary for year as the President of our vast nation.

But do not be discouraged, sir, for I believe I can help you officiate in your great office so that a mob scene like at the Polo Grounds will never more be seen.

This is an age of unrest. The coming baseball season, now so soon to begin in a few months will be a trying one, I fear. We must keep on trying, Judge. We must make baseball safer for those who guide its destinies.

So let us ask ourselves how I can assist you to run things so that things will run smoother.

There is no power, sir, like the power of personal example. For example, supposing a young man of intelligence and high principles like myself, as well as dignified bearings was paid a regular salary to sit in the front row behind the plate at our various games, and by my decorous actions and gentle words of reproof to those around me, cause the ill-bred to feel ashamed of themselves for their rude outbreaks.

As a moral model to our clients in how a person should behave themselves at a ball game, I will inspire them to restrain their angry passions more politely, as well as show a little respect for our high officials occupying the boxes.

Anything at all that happens on the diamond I will express my approval by applauding, and soon the eleven of my refined influence will spread like sixty clear throughout the entire grandstand and subdue them like bread on troubled waters, let us hope. (We will keep it dark, of course, about me being paid a salary to do this.)

Thus eventually, sir, perhaps you can attend our national pastime from time to time in perfect safety as well as security, even when the empires get tired and decide to call it a day.

One more helpful suggestion, sir.

Here is a visiting player running to catch a popfly, we will say, and suddenly a pop or some other bottle gradually floats out from the bleachers and takes him in the mastoid process of his cerumbrellum.

I do not know how it strikes you, Judge, but I think we ought to have our club owners revere our country's Eighteenth Amendment against hard drinks, and only allow their patrons to be served beveridges in paper cups.

Thus we will not have so many of our employees on the disabled list all the time, because you could assault them all day long with such missives and it would not amount to a scrap of paper.

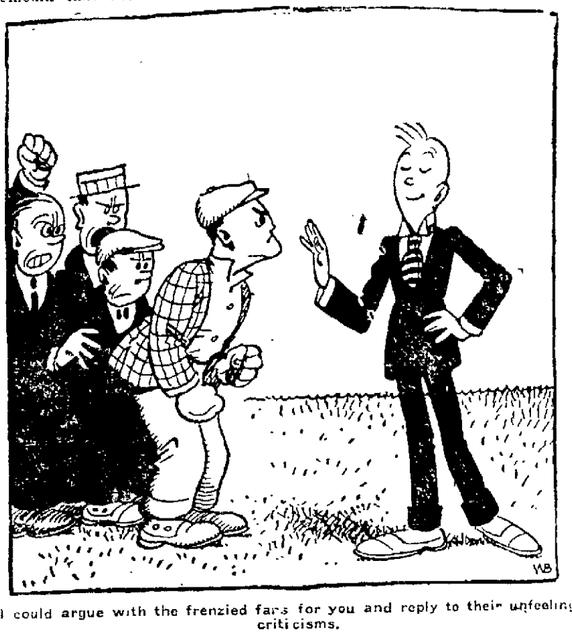

This new rule will deprive our bottle-throwing public of the sole outdoor exercise the majority of them ever take, it is true, but at the same time, how many it will save from a glass arm, let us reflect.

And now in conclusion, Judge, in case you have not been able to give away all that $120,000 to charity as yet, let me delicately mention that my hospital bill for getting so gallantly beaned in your interests was $53.

Cordially yours,
HOMER BALMY.

P. M. You can count on me putting a lot of enthusiasm into this work, Mr. Landis, and never missing a day at my post behind the catcher's box, as I would certainly like to see baseball a little better. H. B.

I could argue with the frenzied fans for you and reply to their unfeeling criticisms.

FAIR MURDERERS.

Nine alleged murderesses were on trial at one time during the last week. In all nine cases the woman rested their defenses, directly or indirectly, on the unwritten law—that he, they attempted to execute their slaughter on the unwritten law—that is, they had wronged them. In all of these cases that have so far terminated the jury verdicts have fallen with the fair defendants—which raises the question: Does a woman that follows the wrong trail thereby acquire the right to kill her companion in wrong doing? In all of these cases the women involved were presumably as willing to follow the primrose path as were the men. Yet when the path reached a turning and they found themselves in danger of having to pay for their sin and folly, they chose to slay their male partners. It is high time for juries to don glasses that blot out the feminine appeal when they take the oaths and listen to the evidence.—Washington Post.

UNIVERSITY NOTES

Twenty-four states are represented among the students at the University of Nebraska, according to the student directory published recently. Students from outside Nebraska come mostly from Iowa, Kansas, South Dakota, Missouri, Wyoming, and Colorado. Only one European student is registered from Lousania. Six gave their home as the Philippines; three, Japan; two, Hawaii; and one, India. Canada and Mexico are represented by one each.

Lively interest is exhibited in the interclass debate for the class championship of the university for 1922-1923. Twenty-seven candidates competed, Thursday, for the honor of membership on their respective class teams. These try-out debates were under the general direction of the inter-class debate committee, assisted by the members of the Nebraska chapter of Delta Sigma Rho, the national honorary society for intercollegiate debaters.

Sunday Vesper Matinee Concerts, Sponsored by Board of Education, to Provide Good Music For Lincoln People by City Schools Music Department

Denied Sunday movies in the theaters Lincoln citizens may soon take advantage of Sunday vesper matinee concerts according to a plan recently announced by Supt M C Lefler with the approval of the board of education.

During the winter months high-class free public concerts are to be given Sunday afternoons in the high school auditorium under the direction of H O Ferguson of the music department of the city schools.

The announcement of the series of three o'clock Sunday concerts has called forth generous endorsements and general approval. Leading ministers of the city, the major officers of the civic clubs, the commercial club, the Y M C A and the Y W C A have given their hearty approval of the plan of the board of education to provide free for the citizens of Lincoln the best entertainments that center in public school and allied musical organizations.

In giving notice of these free Sunday afternoon entertainments Supt Lefler says: "I am pleased to announce the Sunday Vesper matinee concert series which will be given to the public without cost at the Lincoln high school auditorium on the dates indicated. These programs will begin at three o'clock in the afternoon and continue for one hour. They will be under the direction of H O Ferguson of the music department of the Lincoln city schools. Appropriate classical and sacred selections will be rendered by leading artists and musical organizations of the public schools and of the city."

The mayor and leading citizens express ... and hearty approval of the proposed innovation. Mayor Frank Zehrung, speaking of the plan, declared: "I heartily approve the vesper matinee Sunday musical concerts to be given in the high school auditorium. These concerts place high-class free entertainments within the reach of every citizen of Lincoln. I am glad the board of education has arranged these musical treats for the public and I predict that the citizens of Lincoln will crowd the high school auditorium at every concert to show their appreciation of the fine public service rendered by Lincoln's excellent musical talent."

Employers Approve

Employers of various firms and factories will doubtless take advantage of this opportunity to hear these free high class entertainments. Walt Ludwig of the Ludwig Tailors approved the plan enthusiastically and said: "I have already told all my men about it and they'll sure all be there." W ... of the Cushman Motor works is outspoken in his approval. "I am announcing the Sunday musical concerts to all our employees," he declared, "and I trust that every other employer in Lincoln will do likewise. These free public concerts are a good thing for Lincoln."

H O Ferguson supervisor of music in the Lincoln high school and instructor in the University School of Music will have charge of the vesper musical programs which the high school will present in the city auditorium every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock beginning today.

"I consider that a mighty fine move," declared J M Thompson of the Jerome Shamp Implement company when asked his judgment concerning the proposed free Sunday concerts. "It places the very best within the reach of every citizen of Lincoln."

Mrs M E Vance, prominent club woman residing at 26 Garfield street, speaking of the concert series said: "I surely believe in the plan. It is an excellent thing for the public school and co-operating musicians to share their culture with the public. This is putting the best within the reach of all."

Mrs W W Whitfield 1217 K street personally favors the giving of the concert series. "I heartily endorse the plan," she said. "I think it is a wonderful opportunity for the young people of Lincoln to hear the Lincoln musicians especially on Sunday afternoons in sacred and classical concerts."

Lincoln Couple Celebrates 60th Anniversary; Maintains Home Center of Happy Married Life

On November 22, 1862, Miss Mattie A. Nicholson and the Rev. John Henry Carpenter were married at Horicon, Wis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John A. Savage, D. D., president of the Carroll college, Waukesha, Wis.

Last Wednesday, Dr. and Mrs. Carpenter celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of that day very quietly at their home, 1521 Washington street, this city.

Their boys and girls have long since been grown, but to Mrs. Carpenter the yard still "the children," and all the children came for the anniversary. Sickness and distance kept their families away and Thanksgiving is to be the real homecoming day for the whole family. Dr. and Mrs. George H. Carpenter from Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Carpenter and children from Fairbury, and Mrs Alona C. Little and her daughters of this city. Wednesday evening, after prayer meeting at the Westminster Presbyterian church, an informal reception was held for the couple.

Sixty years of married life were completed by Dr. and Mrs. John Henry Carpenter on Wednesday of last week. They were married in Horicon, Wis., near Milwaukee, by the president of Carroll college in Waukesha, November 22, 1862. Dr. Carpenter has had pastoral charges in Iowa, Minnesota, Ohio, and Illinois for forty-five of those sixty years, preached as a student for three years previous to 1862, and has supplied a church nearly every Sunday since coming to Lincoln fifteen years ago. Dr. and Mrs. Carpenter are both remarkably youthful for their ages, and Mrs. Carpenter takes great delight in caring for their home.

Life Sixty Years Ago.

Sixty years is a good share of life. Sixty years ago, Lincoln was president. The Civil War was not half over. There were no gasoline vehicles of any kind. There were no electric street railways. In those sixty years, monarchies have risen and fallen, republics have taken their place, towns have been razed and built again, the country has participated in two wars, poles have been discovered, life has been revolutionized. In all that time, this couple have gone serenely on, doing the duty lying nearest, accepting the new things in their life without question and with belief that all was for the best, climbing the long hill and going slowly down the other slope, until now they rest content, happy in the presence of each other, comrades now as they were three score years ago.

"In this day of easily made and unmare marriages, what is your rule of life for a happy married life."

"Well, I don't know," Dr. Carpenter answered slowly.

"Perhaps a little bit of compromise goes the longest way. People don't always think alike, but if they try to give in a little, if they try to see the other's side, things go along pretty smoothly.

Discuss Married Life.

"The trouble with many marriages today is that the people do not make the home the center of life. With so many women's societies and men's societies to take them away from the home, they do not have time to enjoy it. Consequently they gradually grow away from it, and soon there is no home left.

"To live economically, that is, always within one's means, is a help too.

"And a good bit of work scattered in enough to keep one always busy and interested. One can not stop to let little things bother him when he is busy, and perhaps it is those little things that makes so many unhappy marriages. The proper amount of work keeps one young, too, and interested.

"Yes, economy and compromise and home and work make a married life that is happy."

Fifteen Years in Lincoln.

Dr. and Mrs. Carpenter came to Lincoln fifteen years ago, after he had resigned from his last active pastorate. Since coming here, he has supplied nearly every church in the Nebraska City presbytery as well as preaching in many other churches. He supplied the church at Bennet for two years and the one in Firth for a year and one-half.

Mrs. Carpenter was born in Wallingford, Vt., June 22, 1840. In spite of eighty-two years, she is as active as a woman many years younger. She delights in the fact that she is her own "Bridget" and likes nothing better than to take care of her own home and prepare the meals.

An Ordained Minister.

Dr. Carpenter was born in Troy, N. Y., August 26, 1845—one would not know it—and graduated from Carroll college in 1868. He spent two years in Princeton Theological seminary, going from there to McCormick, which had just been organized, graduating in 1871. He went back for another year at Princeton the next year. During the summer vacation of 1869, he organized Sunday schools in Coos county, N. H. under the auspices of the American Sunday School union.

Following the custom with student ministers, Dr. Carpenter was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Winnebago, Wis., at Portage May 10, 1860. He supplied several pulpits before his ordination in Horicon in 1862, where he began his pastoral work. During the Civil War he served with the U. S. Christian commission in lower Mississippi. He has served as pastor of churches in Illinois, Ohio, Minnesota, and Iowa. Dr. Carpenter received the degrees of Ph. D. and D. D. from the University of Omaha.

LEAGUE MAKES PLANS FOR COMING PROGRAMS.

The advisory and executive boards of the Lincoln League of Women Voters met in special session, Wednesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Newlon, presiding. Discussion dealt chiefly with the legislative program for the coming year. The support of the state league's legislative program was unanimously considered the first work of the local league, and it was moved that every member of the Lincoln league keep herself in readiness to answer the call of the president to act with the state legislative committee. Trips to the state institutions located in Lincoln and vicinity, will furnish members and visitors in the city an excellent opportunity to study the work and needs of these great institutions.

A second important work of the league for the year is the study of or co-operation with a general committee on housing conditions in Lincoln.

The resignation of Miss Myrtle Stevenson as secretary, was accepted and Miss Clarissa Delano was elected to fill the vacancy.

Chairman of the following committees were appointed: Program—Mrs. W. L. Curtis, membership—Mrs. W. L. Curtis. Finance—Mrs. C. L. Hall.

The next regular meeting of the league will occur on Saturday, December 2 in Faculty Hall of the Temple. Mrs. H. H. Wheeler will address the organization on the "League's Legislative Program and Suggestions for its Accomplishment." Five minute reports on the state convention at Hastings will be given as follows:

Time will be allowed for questions and discussion. All women of Lincoln and Lancaster county are invited to attend.

The annual Thanksgiving dinner party will be held at the city Y. W. C. A. November 30 and 12:30 p. m. The Puritan procession down to the dining rooms will again be featured. Plans are being made to make the occasion a delightful one in every way. Eight hostesses, one at each the large tables will be in charge. The dinner, however, will be served promply so that those who are attending the football game will have sufficient time to get seats. LOCAL LEAGUE WOMEN VOTERS TO BE FORMED.

Mrs. J. E. Baird of Lincoln, who succeeds Mrs. E. F Pettis of Lincoln as director of the First district plans to begin immediately in organizing local leagues in her districts. A number of dormant leagues will be revived and new ones started. Mrs. Baird was a delegate to the national as well as state convention of the League of Women Voters.

Lincoln delegates to the state convention which met last week in Hastings are unanimous in their praise of the hospitality extended by the city of Hastings. Members of the Hastings league opened their homes and placed their automobiles at the disposal of delegates and visitors.

Lincoln was well represented on the program. In addition to the official delegates, Mrs. C. S. Clayton, as state vice president of the W. C. T. U., and Mrs. G. H. Wentz, as state president of the Nebraska-Parent-Teachers' association, extended greetings from their organizations, and voiced their common interests.

The work of the Nebraska league in defense of the primary, received special commendation by the national president, Mrs. Maud Wood Park. She expressed approval of the financial aid extended by the men friends of the Omaha league for this work. Men, she said are more and more and rightfully so contributing financially to the league, whose work for the education of our citizens, affects men as well as women.

Y. W. C. A. MEMBERS TO VISIT SOUTH AMERICA.

Just a year ago in June the finance division of the Y. W. C. A. was considering the possibility of taking a party of association members and interested friends to visit the countries of the Orient. The plans materialized rapidly and the party consisting of fifteen members sailed for the Orient in January, and after spending almost four months, returned to the states in May.

At the time of their return, Miss Elizabeth MacFarland, national executive of South America, was in this country and requested that a similar party be brought to South America. Miss MacFarland said that in discussing the possibilities of such a party with the Continental committee she found great enthusiasm. The feeling was that such a party would be valuable, not only because of the association work which they could actually see but also because they could gain an understanding of conditions and needs of women in these countries, and return ready to co-operate actively in developing a financial support, not only through their own contributions but in interesting their friends.

The national board approves the planning of such a party to start in February, 1923 to be gone approximately three months. They have found that it would be possible to cut the rates materially from the first estimate, and are reducing the price to $2,000 this to cover approximately eighty days of travel and to include all expenses except purely personal ones and the fees to the stewards on shipboard.

While the trip is being undertaken especially in the interest of the Young Women's Christian association, the itinerary would include the sights usually seen by visitors. There would be in addition most unusual opportunities made possible by association secretaries to see the industrial, economic, political and social life of the countries visited. While all plans are subject to change, the tentative itinerary would be: Sailing from New York through the Panama canal down the west coast of South America, stopping at various points of interest and taking the Transandean railway to Buenos Aires. The return trip will be up the east coast, stopping at Montevideo, Santos and Rio de Janeiro and possibly Trinidad and the Island of Barcados, arriving in New York sometime in May, probably about the 14th.

Any woman interested in taking such a trip is asked to write to Miss Edith H. Keely, 600 Lexington, Ave., New York, the Y. W. C. A. secretary who is in charge of this tour.

ECHOES FROM WOMEN'S CLUBS OVER THE STATE

The Syracuse Woman's club recently celebrated the silver anniversary of the organization, with a public reception in the Methodist church. A delightful program was enjoyed and addresses given by the district and state presidents were excellent. Mrs. E. B. Penney, the state president, furnished much food for thought in her talk. Several letters from absent members were read and appreciated.

The closing number of the program, was the initial appearance of the newly organized Ladies' Glee club, under the supervision of Miss Weyant, supervisor of music in the public schools. This number was greatly appreciated by the audience as the blending of voices was remarkable.

A huge birthday cake was a feature of the celebration.

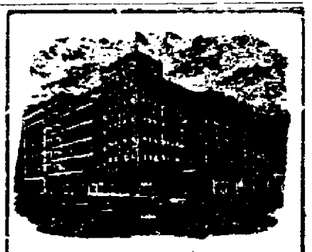

The Raymond Woman's club met at the farm home of Mrs. Broth A Martin, Wednesday, Nov 22. "Topics of Interest" was the general subject and papers were read by Mrs. Helen Helm, Mrs. Sara Hermance, Mrs. Celia Brey, and Mrs. Guen-

Who's Who in Lincoln

Miss Clara Slade, psychologist for the city schools, received her training at Wesleyan university; Vineland, N. J., and has nearly completed her doctors degree at Columbia, N. Y.

Lincoln was the first city in the state to open a school for misfits and Miss Slade had charge of one of the two which were ready for business at the same time. She remained in this place for five years, patiently encouraging and skillfully training the fingers of these children to make beautiful and artistic things: these boys and girls who did not fit in with the class in their own school, came many blocks that they might be instructed by one who had studied their needs and understood their problems.

In one time tiny toy tables chairs, beds and parlor suits made the eyes of these children glisten with pride and joy, while the bodies straightened and stood up tall with honest confidence. They had begun to feel that they were different from other children and could not do anything worth while, and the realization that the little pieces of furniture are the result of their own handiwork almost overcomes them. Later a full sized floor lamp, a swing or a day bed before the astonished eyes of these little workers and then joy was complete.

Three years ago Miss Slade assumed the supervision of the special rooms and began her work as psychologist, testing the intelligence for the purpose of better understanding the child, as the schools are trying to adjust themselves to all kinds of children. Even a room for deaf has been in operation at the Prescot school since the new building was completed.

In speaking of this room Miss Slade said:

"As there is only one room in the city some children must go a long way to reach it, but after the parents have become interested they manage some way to keep the child in school."

Miss Slade has been a tireless worker in the juvenile court for many years, where she is called upon to do testing. She spent one summer in Beatrice where she gave a course of instruction to the heads of departments from all state institutions.

For two years, she has conducted classes in the psychological department of the state university for the training of teachers. A clinic is held once a week where children, who are impossible to any school either regular or special, and who must have a great deal of individual attention, are taken for study. Later on an advanced student in phychology is sent into the home to interest these children, and prepare them for entrance to the public schools.

"It is encouraging," said Miss Slade, "When a child berins to show improvement, and we can see some results from the time and energy expended, for we have never failed to get results."

PLAYS A PART IN WORLD AFFAIRS

arrived in France December 13. There he was given the title, "Assistant Specialist in the Near Eastern Division for Territorial, Political and Economic Intelligence." To fulfill this overwhelming cognomen, Dr. Gray made lengthy reports on the rainfall, imports, exports, mineral resources, international law, and consideration of claims of any country in his division, upon which he was asked to report.

In addition to this work, he was connected with the African program as American Secretary of the commission that drew up conventions on the control of trade in arms and ammunition, the control of the liquor traffic in Africa, and the revision of the General Act of Berlin of 1885 and the General Act of Brussels of 1890. Contrary again to opinion, Dr. Gray came back with a higher opinion of men and women than he had had when he went to Paris, and a high opinion of the amount of work done.

Dr. Gray says:

Belgians In Africa.

"Belgium had been supplying the Congo with arms for a good many years. It is all right to give the Africans muzzle-loading guns with which to shoot wild game, but they should not have Martini rifles nor repeaters. Without a word of protest, the Belgians gave up this very lucrative revenue for the good of the Africans.

"A similar nstance is that of certain European countries exporting liquors to Africa, some of it, as the 'trade gin,' particularly vile stuff. They, as had Belgium, gave up the revenue for the betterment of the blacks.

"This act was a sacrifice to them all, for it was immediately after the war, when revenue meant so much to all countries. It was an act of greatest altruism.

"I had lived under war conditions, and I did not have the idea that the peace would bring Utopia. I had no foolish ideas, as a great many people did, when I went to France, and I came back with a much higher opinion of the decency of men.

"I have never worked so hard in my life as I did at the conference. If there is any place that men work harder than they did there, I do not want to be there."

With American Embassy.

For the year after the war, he was connected with the American embassy at Paris. There he had charge of the Minutes of the Conference of Ambassadors, which met three and four times each week to attend to the details of the Peace treaty. Following these meetings, the voluminous minutes were indexed by Dr. Gray. He was called upon at all times to give information on mooted questions, and during the year, he wrote the history of the Austrian and Hungarian treaties, in odd moments. It was necessary that the French and English copies of the replies of the allied and associated powers to the German delegation's remarks on the Conditions of Peace, the preliminary draft of the final treaty, be exactly alike. Dr. Gray with colleagues from the other allied powers worked from 8 o'clock to 6:30 o'clock in the morning comparing the two. M. Andre Tardieu read the French copy at top speed, and the others compared the texts as he read, the only relief being the moment's wait for copy.

While in Paris, Dr. Gray was appointed American representative of the International Academic union, composed of representatives of all learned societies of the allied and associated powers and certain neutral countries, to bring about a closer harmony between their scholars. The meeting was held in Brussels, and the union representatives were entertained by King Albert at dinner Dr. Gray, as the American delegate, had the honor of being the first man to be presented to the king, who spoke to each one in his own tongue.

Held Important Position.

The chief of the American Colonial division of the conference had been George Louis Beer, the best man in this country, according to Dr. Gray, on Colonial affairs. He was made head of the Mandate division of the International Secretariat of the League of Nations, and he appointed Dr. Gray as his secretary. The appointment was confirmed by Sir Eric Drummond. Mr. Beer died, and Dr. Gray was deprived of his friend and of his opportunity to take part in the league.

At the present time, Dr. Gray is editing Mr. Beer's reports to the House commission on the African question He has brought them up to date, adding notes and annexes of documents wherever necessary. The book is now in press.

Wars and peace conferences and treaties take up a good bit of time, they form a large interest in a man's life. He is absorbed by them, and gives himself to them without stint. Through them he is involved in world affairs, he is helping to make history that men long after him will read. At the time, they seem to be the only motive of his life, and he wonders what he will do on that day when they claim him no longer To him, those coming days are as a void, when he will be hard pressed to fill the minutes that then are so over full. Paris is the heart of the world for him—he can not imagine that there is another place that can ever claim him. He forgets that his dreams and his desires will come back to him, when he can think of simpler things. He forgets that his past life has been put aside, not done forever, and that it is waiting for him, as it waited when he first undertook it.

And so it is with Dr. Gray. He has had big things in his life, but now in his study, lined with queer and interesting things, he has taken up his old line of scholarship. He is giving the university students a part of his rich experience in world affairs and of the deep knowledge he has acquired through the years. He is instructing in Hebrew, Persian and Arabic; he is giving courses in Oriental civilization, Oriental religion, and philosophy, and bringing to the students the influence of the Far East on the Occident. And, in his very few spare moments, when he is not engaged in university affairs, he is working on a volume, "Pagan Religions and Civilization of the Balto-Slavs," which will be ready in year or so.

town. He was a fireman on a locomotive before the war, but his eyes were too poor for this work after he returned. He started to take vocational training in auto mechanics, but found that he could not do that either. He at last feels that he has found a place for himself and he has definite plans for a poultry farm that grows. All the men are encouraged to start out in a small way and work into the business gradually. Mr. Dupont will have a local market for his products as Pratt is a town of about 5,000 population. It is very important that a poultry farm be located either where there is a good local market or where there are good railroad connections with a larger place.

Some Successes.

Wm. R. Scott did office work before he joined the army and took up the same work after he came back but found that he could not stand to be inside. His parents live on a farm just east of Lincoln and he went there hoping to recover in a short time. He did not improve as rapidly as he expected to, and finally a Red Cross nurse heard of him and had him take a medical examination so that he could get his compensation. Later the Red Cross put him in touch with the federal bureau of vocational training. He is now reasing poultry and going to school at the same time.

One of the most interesting projects is that of W. J. Mortonson at Fifty-third and Q streets. Mr. Mortonson has had a couple of years high school work and he did office work before the war and for a while afterwards. He bought his ten-acre farm last spring, and he and his wife have a beautiful home there. He was in the chicken business on another place before he has this place and his Buff Orpingtons have carried away many prizes at the state fair in the past two years. His speciality is fancy breeding rather than egg or meat production, but he plans to go in for egg production as well as fancy breeding later on.

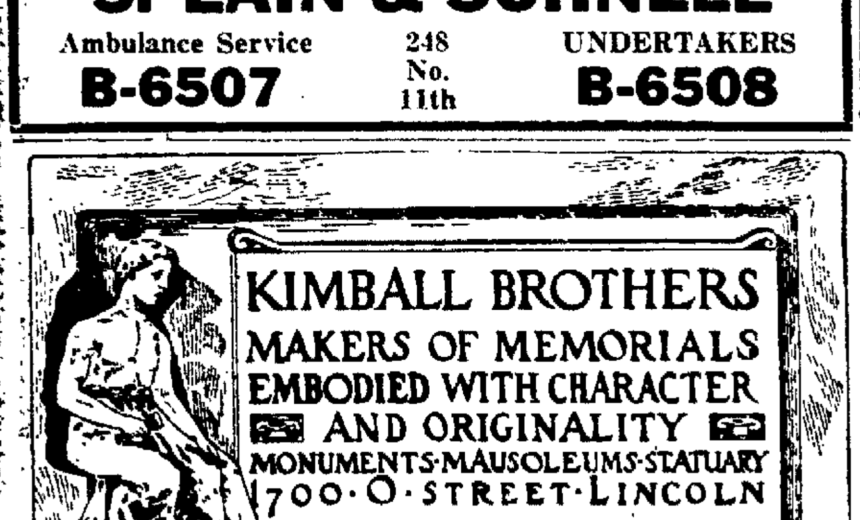

Mr. Mortonson has detailed plans worked out to use the entire ten acres as a chicken and fruit farm to be known as the "Royal Poultry and Fruit Farm." With the exception of a small strip along the lower side of the farm, which is to be used as pasture for two milk cows, the entire ten acres will be utilized for chicken houses and pen with fruit in the pens. Cherries, grapes and currants will be set out. The cows will furnish milk for the chickens. A garage is to take the place of the barn that is on the place now and the colony houses that Mr. Mortonson built last spring will be moved. The old chicken house which was there when he bought the place will be used for some time but eventually disposed of. Every inch of ground is to be utilized and appearance as well as practical convenience has been given consideration in planning the grounds.

Mr. Mortonson started in the poultry business first and in the vocational training along that line later. He is doing both at the present time.

The Catholic students club of the university will give a banquet Thanksgiving evening at the Lincoln hotel in honor of the Nebraska and the Notre Dame football teams.

Lincoln Women Suggest Worth-while Books for Reading During Long Evenings of Winter Months; Well Balanced Program of Fiction, History and Travel

The year is ending, before it has scarce had time to begin. The farewell gift of the old and the first offering of the new is the same, chilling days when the long evenings seem like the libation of a benefactor's fate.

Long, long evenings, when the trees groan in their cold nakedness and the smarting wind pushes little rain snow swirls down the black pavement. It's warm now, glorious days, when the rainbow's pot of gold might have upset around us and to be out in the intoxicating air is all we would ask of life. Some morning, though, we will find that J. Frost has left his card in the night, and soon all will be white that once was gold. It's only a temporary Arcadia, this Indian summer,—the last bounteous giving of a generous autumn. And when it is gone—

"It's good to be at home tonight," we'll say.

Then will we go to the book shelves where the red and the brown and the blue volumes fall against each other like sleepy children and take out the ones that have been waiting patiently for the end of the summer regime to come into their own.

Winter and Books.

What will they be? Each to his own taste, and the choice will be varied. With the outdoors beckoning less alluringly, safe to say though that the fatter books will be in demand, even though their contents may be no heavier than those we thoughtlessly term "hammock reading." More time for prolonged reading, greater leisure to peruse three or four chapters in an evening instead of that many pages, when the world is white with snow.

A couple of years ago, the Bookman gave us the results of a survey taken by the English Journal upon the most popular books among women of the middle west. Business women and housewives, teachers were not included, were asked to give their choice. The women were variously educated, from grammar graduates to those holding college degrees, but the majority had at least a high school education.

To be countend, each book must be chosen at least five times. The choice ranged from "The Five Little Peppers" and "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" through several of the sickeningly sweet "best sellers" to "Les Miserables," which obtained twenty-five votes. The most casual observer might wonder at the delightful books, of two years ago, which did not require too great an expenditure of gray matter, that failed to receive a quintet of votes.

Raised eyebrows and hands held big in horror would express the opinion of the intelligentsia at the choice of the literary bourgeoisie—but too much blame can not be laid upon them. Such a state can not all be shoved upon mental laziness. Sometimes, they knew no others. The name sounded pleasing, and they chose, having no guide to the heights of literary art. 'Tis an old and trite remark:

"Oh, I'd like to read that, but I did not know anything about it."

New Books Suggested.

Well, this winter none shall read "The Joys of Josephine" because he did not know. Stripped of sugar coating, honest, fearless are the new books, facing life as it is, not as the Mid-Victorians believed it, but none the less healthy for that. The better books for winter reading have been suggested by three Lincoln women. If you would lay out a course of selfdevelopment for the coming months, some, at least, of the books mentioned by these women will appear on the model home book shelf. "Mode" does not necessarily include only those books that bring deep frowns of concentration, but it includes fiction, for who can be a clever dinner partner unless he, generically speaking, can prattle of the latest heroines?

All of the three were in accord on one of the books "you must read," "This Freedom," by A. S. M. Hutchinson, even though reviewers rave when it is mentioned. "Peter Whiffle, His Life and Works," by Carl Van Vechten was given by both Mrs. Maurice Deutsch and Mrs. Ernest Ames, who gave the outstanding books on their winter reading lists. Arnold Bennett's "Mr. Prohack," "Rough Hewn," by Dorothy Canfield, and "Babbit," Sinclair Lewis's newest offering are agreed upon as fitting for fiction reading by Mrs. Ames, and another who would be anonymous. For the supplementary lists, there is a wide variety, travel, fiction, biography, some of the older favorites, and drama.

When the light is fixed, just so, and the winged chair in just the proper position, and the reader is a little weary from the day, Mrs. Ames suggests that he might read "My Chinese Marriage," by an unnamed author. Looming dimly in the background, ready for later perusal, might be any of the following: "Sleeping Fires," Gertrude Atherton, "The Man Who Did the Right Thing," Sir Harry Johnston, "The Million Dollar Suitcase," MacGowan and Newberry, "Saint Teresa," Henry Sydnor Harrison, "The Green Goddess," Louise Milne, and "Lost Valley," Katherine Fullerton Gerould.

For Restful Moments.

Possibly the shining dollar that must cover so many things can not cover many books, but cramped dollars do not meant cramped desires, and there may be a neighbor with a refined choice in books. On the fiction shelves in his library may be John Galsworthy's "The Forsyte Saga," "Love and Friendship," Jane Austen, "Intrusion," Beatrice Seymour, "Scaramouch," Rafael Sattini Frances Hogdson Burnett's "Head of the House of Coombe" and "Robin," "Mr. Waddington of Wyck," May Sinclair, "The Boy Grew Older," Heywood Broun, "The Secret Places of the Heart," H. G. Wells, and "The Bright Shawl," Joseph Hergesheimer. Four other books that should be read between now and the time the golf course calls again are: "The Vehement Flame," Margaret Deland; Willa Cather's "One of Ours," "Far to Seek," Maud Diver, and "Glimpses of the Moon," Edith Wharton.

Mrs. Ames does not, however, feel that the well balanced winter reading course would be composed entirely of fiction, but she would tuck in a little drama, some of last year's New York successes that we in the hinterland may get some day, and a few narratives of travel. In the former classification, she places "The Hairy Ape," "Anna Christie," and "The First Man," Eugene O'Neill. Some of the latter, and some of the biography that she can recommend to while away the leisure minutes in "Vagabonding Down the Andes," H. A. Franck, a delicious tale of a lazy journey through the South American mountains, "Tahiti Days," Hector MacQuarrie, "My Life Here and There," Princess Cantacuzene, "American Portraits," Gamaliel Bradford, "Story of Mankind," Hendrik Van Loon, and "Memoirs of a Midget," Walter de la Mare.

Further books that she knows of and can suggest are "Here, There and Everywhere," Lord Frederic Hamilton, "Sea and Sardinia," D. H. Lawrence, "Hail Columbia," W. L. George, "Queen Victoria and Eminent Victorians," Lytton Strachey, "Letters of James Gibbon," Huneker, "Life and Letters of Walter H. Page," B. J. Hendrick, "My Discovery of England," Stephen Leacock, and "Democracy," James Bryce.

Suggests "Heavy" Reading.

Briefer as to fiction, but briefer in all things, was the list of her who requested that her name be not used. Eight books of fiction she opened her list with a book corresponding unconsciously with the "The Outlines of History," even though it is more local "Civilization in the United States." The latter book, a good thick one, was written by thirty Americans and three Europeans, and deals with all phases of life in this country. Mrs. Deutsch very highly recommends "The American Language," by H. L. Mencken, which tells in pithy way the many ways American language is different from English. In it, there is a splendid tribute to Miss Louise Pound, Mrs. Deutsch said. Another book that she recommends is "A Century of the Renaissance," written by Louis Batisfol. This book was included in her winter reading last year, but she intends to read is again this year. Each year, she also reads some historical works, pertaining to a particular country. This year it is to be Sicily, a history and a country that goes back about two thousand years.

Mrs. Deutsch recommended "Peter Whiffle" because it is one of the unusual books. It deals with the Bohemian life in Florence, Paris, and New York, and is intimately told by a writer whose life is spent in such surroundings. The book is odd, but interesting in its difference. While she does not unlimitedly recommend the works of Theodore Dresser—she does suggest them to those who are Bohemian in their reading. He is persona non grata with many, but his writing is forceful, accurate, and realistic. For those who admit a different standard of living for Europeans, and who do not try to judge all by the Puritanical moral tape measure, be is intensely diverding. "Many Marriages," by Sherwood Anderson, now running in the Dial, is a bit of fiction Mrs. Deutsch recommends, but it has not yet appeared in book form. To supplement the reading of books, she recommends good magazines, two of her favorites being the Dial and the Freeman.

Some Unusual Books.

Two of the unusual books, which she has enjoyed, or three rather, are out of the usual line. The first one is strictly a feminine book, but the other two would interest men and women, if for no other reason than their novelty. The first one is by Dr Lulu Runt Peters, "Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories," and the other two are on auto-suggestion, one by Basil King, "Conquest of Fear" and "Self-Mastery Through Auto-Suggestion," by Emile Coue.

Probably the most unusual list was selected by Mrs. Deutsch, who

University Notes

Prof. Ernest Anderson of the department of chemistry, who came to the university in 1920 from the Transylvania college, Pretoria, South Africa, addressed the Axis club of Lincoln, November 20, giving a popular description of the location and the methods of working the great diamond and gold mines of South Africa. Diamonds are mainly found at Kimberly and near Pretoria in igneous mterial forced up in post-glacial ages.

Prof. J. P. Senning of the political science department addressed the state convention of the League of Women Voters at Hastings, November 17, on the "Administration of Taxation in Nebraska."

Stop Rheumatism!

S. S. S. Is the Great Builder of Red-Blood Cells and Rheumatism Must Go! Used Since 1826—Just Try It!

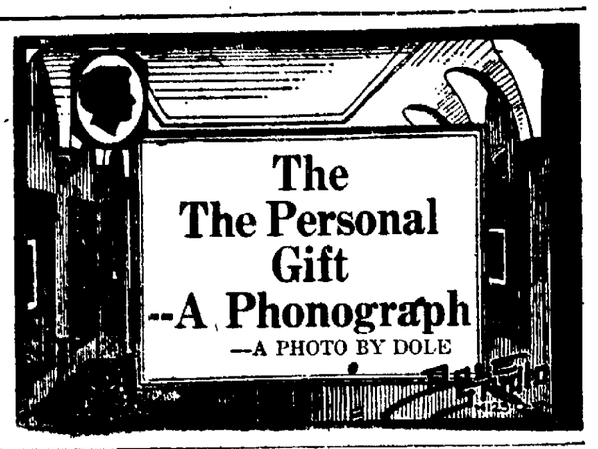

"Rheumatism? Me? No, indeed, it's all gone, every bit of it! It's sunshine and joy for me now for the first time in years. I feel a wonderful glory again in the free motion I used to have when my days were younger. I look at my hands and think of the twists and swellings they used to have. I bend way over to the floor. I haven't been able to do that in many years. I can thank S. S. S. for it all! To me it was a rising sun of joy and liberty. Brothers and sisters in misery, do not close your eyes and think that health, free motion and strength are gone from you forever! It is not so. It is here and now for all of you. S. S. S. is waiting to help you." There is a reason why S. S. S. will help you. When you increase the number of your red-blood cells, the entire system undergoes a tremendous change. Everything depends on blood-strength. Blood which is minus sufficient red-cells leads to a long list of troubles. Rheumatism is one of them. S. S. S. is the great blood-cleanser, blood-builder, system strengthener, nerve invigorator. It stops skin eruptions, too, pimples, blackheads, acne boils, eczema. It builds up run down, tired men and women, beautifies complexions, makes the flesh firmer. Charlie Batiste, Florence, Texas, writes: "I take great pleasure in letting you know what S. S. S. has done for me. I have used four bottles of S. S. S. I am up so I can walk. The pain has left my leg. Before using S. S. S. I was in bed three months and could not walk. I will recommend S. S. S. to all who suffer with Rheumatism."

"Suffering has gone from your face, mother!"

ANNUAL CONVENTION HELD IN DES MOINES.

The next annual convention of the National League of Women Voters will be held at Des Moines, Iowa, April 9-14, 1923. Place and date were decided by the governing board of the league at a meeting in Chicago, after receipt of messages from the Iowa League of Women Voters, the governor of the state, the Des Moines chamber of commerce, and other bodies urging Iowa's qualifications to be hostess to the first league convention held west of the Mississippi. Governor Kendall has promised the convention a welcome as broad as Iowa's corn fields, as deep as her coal mines, and as "high as the beneficent heavens which canopy her generous citizenship." The convention will have no special feature such as the pan-American conference of women which was held in connection with the last annual convention at Baltimore last April, but the growth of the league, whose membership now includes millions of women, has been so great during the year that every state in the union will send a considerable delegation. The governing board has discussed some unusual plans for the political education of women and a number of new ideas will be presented to the sessions of the convention. The subject discussed at the mass meeting which is called at every convention will be international co-operation to prevent war, and Miss Ruth Morgan, of New York, chairman of the committee on international co-operation to prevent war, will preside.

MISS JESSIE ACKERMAN WITH BUSINESS WOMEN.

Several members of the Business Women's league attended the luncheon given Mrs. Maud Wood Park at the Lincoln hotel November 18.

One hundred fifty members and friends of the League and Axis clubs met at the league rooms Friday evening for dinner. Miss Jessie Ackerman gave a very interesting talk on her extensive travels in all parts of the world. Before and after her talk, she chatted with various groups relative to her experiences in Japan, India, Australia etc. All voted it a delightfully profitable evening. Mr. and Mrs. J. Guy Mansell, at whose home Miss Ackerman is a guest, were also guests of the club. The decorations for the evening were a blending of the colors of the two clubs, evidenced in candles and chrysanthemums.

There was a goodly representation of league members at the luncheon for J. J. Tigert, national commissioner of Education at the Chamber of Commerce Monday noon.

It is not too late to bring gifts to the club rooms for the children of inmates of state penitentiaries. The box will be started on its journey by Dec. 1.

Miss Clara Gast will be hostess Wednesday evening. Miss Della Grosskrueker, Friday evening and Miss Bess Owens, Saturday evening.

BUSINESS WOMEN HEAR WORLD CURRENT EVENTS.

The outstanding event in business women's circles, during the past week, was the address of Miss Jessie Ackerman, given before the Business Woman's League and the Axis club, on Friday evening. The vivid manner in which Miss Ackerman discussed the "World Current Events" and the possibilities for women of today proved inspirational to all who heard her. The many illustrations, tinged with humor, made her talk both interesting and entertaining.

Another meeting of the Axis club was held on Tuesday when Dr. Ernest Anderson addressed the club on "The Diamond and Gold Mines of South Africa." A complete outline of the process of diamond mining in the leading Transvaal mines and illustrations of the various uses of the different varieties of diamonds, were given by Dr. Anderson. Color Introduced on Bands.

An attractive method of introducing color is used on a number of frocks of sports silk, in which the color is not pronounced. Bands of crepe, in almond green, on a light gray green, for instance, bring out the shade of the material, and the same use of color is found on rose and other colored models.

Smocking is used for simple crepe fashions that suggest themselves for real warm weather wear. In one case it is used for a deep shoulder yoke, and across the apron front of a white crepe frock. For this same type of dress, pleating is also employed, and the girdles are of ribbon, flower trimmed.

Some French dresses in voiles are charmingly dainty, and are in clever color effects, such as pale yellow touched with rose. Flowered borders in cotton crepe make smart models that have girdles and sashes of colored velvet ribbons.

Color Combinations for Sports Costumes.

The sports costumes consisting of dress and coat combine such colors as black and banana, white and pheasant, or red and white and consist for the most part of the hip-length rather boxy coat. The frock is simple and straight of line, employing the crepe bodice which exactly matches the color of the jacket. In one instance, the only embellishment is an elaborately trailing monogram on the side of the bodice which also marks the single pocket on the jacket.

In several of the other models, the skirt is slightly gathered in to the broad girdle which is braided in soutache, the same trimming outlining the neck and sleeves. Sleeves in this type of frock are almost always short. In the costume which usese red and white, the mandarin-like short jacket is covered with all-over embroidery in white, of decidedly Chinese inspiration.

New Types of Drapes.

A number of new adaptations bring out the fact that drapes are to be used in new renditions, most of these inspired by the recent Vionnet modes. Several drapes down the center front and center back are shown, while the ties from shoulder and hip lines are also exploited here. Most of these models are made in flat crepe, though a few are seen of Canton.

Silver and crystal beads on velvets are shown, the gowns made in extremely plain style, with square cut or bateau necklines. Pleated and tucked effects, as capes, are frequent throughout the collection, and one unusual style has an underskirt of silver cloth which is pleated. In the center front, there is a rosette of red velvet, and the gown itself is of white crepe the whole making an attractive color scheme.

Some dancing frocks in light colored chiffons are shown, with many layers of material, often in shaded effects, while rounds of Valenciennes lace as trimming are also much used, with French flowers.

Round and Bateau Necklines.

Necklines are round or bateau, with some inclusion of the pointed neck. Sleeves are long or short, as the frock demands. The taffeta frocks use tiny short sleeves banded with the embroidery or paillette types that are used consistently in the line.

For southern wear printed Roshanaras in red, orange and brown tones are primarily accented at the present time. The sports models are plain and allow the design of the frock to carry the weight of style. A taffeta frock bids fair to be popular in the collection with its tiny coat style accented with heavy embroidery in ecru. A good deal of lingerie touches are noted in the line, modes is laid on dark blue black and brown. Seal brown as well as pale tan is stressed. In the sports lines every good shade is used and even white, which was so popular last year. Almond green, coffee are quite consistently developed in the sheer afternoon frocks that are almost formal enough for evening wear.

Good Color Combinations For Spring.

Spring frocks present interesting color combinations and silhouettes accenting simplicity. The circular skirt, as well as the straight are subtly emphasized and there is no definite stress put on either one. The center drape which has been so popular in the afternoon frocks is cleverly simulated in some of the circular skirts.

Taffeta frocks, as put forth by this firm, are uniquely done and taffeta and crepe combinations are presented. Black and dark blue with some brown numbers from the color basis in this spring silk collection. One especially smart model uses black taffeta an white crepe printed with an allover Paisley design. Applique of the white crepe show through open designs on the skirt and further create the black and white effect. The skirt is rather full and fastens to the close fitting bodice of printed crepe with a fulled belt of black and white moire. The neckline and sleeves are particularly well treated.

Center Drape Suggested.

For sports wear, several interesting frocks are shown. One gray matelasse with a center drape suggested with a divided circular overdress, and a blouse waist developing a black and white embroidered trimming accents the tones of the gray. Another crepe frock combined with printed blue crepe, stresses color combinations as sponsored for spring.

Flat crepe is prominent in the collection. Touches of color in printed crepes combined with black forms a type of dress often seen in the collection. The majority show straight lines but there is a generous inclusion of the circular skirt developed either in the full skirt or the apron type that allows the back of the skirt to hang perfectly free.

Monkey Fur on Sleeves.

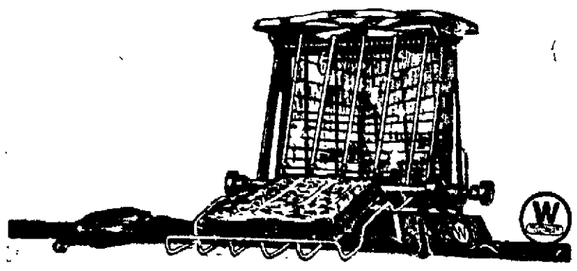

Solid black frocks form a part of the line. Sleeves trimmed with monkey fur, skirts marked off in regular design by narrow bands of braiding and other methods of self trimming are noted, one frock using sheer chiffon sleeves trimmed with money fur. Another version of this frock employs colored embroidery in place of the monkey fur. These chiffon sleeves are a distinct novelty.

Paisley effects on a blue background, touches of colored ribbon and other individual color attempts are a rather general part of the line. The use of color is most careful, and the result has been that these frocks are capable of being interpreted for occasions that demand either demure or brilliant color displays.

Dinner dresses in chiffon in high shades. Elizabeth crepe and metallic laces in silver and gold are also presented for spring.

With Jacket Simulating Bolero.

Poret twill is shown in early spring models, that also accent color. One model shown develops a tiny jacket that assumes the charm of a bolero. The sleeves and neckline are outlined with narrow ruching of lace. Two large metalic buttons fasten the jacket in the center of the waistline and a large circular overskirt cut in apron fashion hangs below an underskirt of twill cut perfectly straight. Dull purple silk touches the sleeves and the edges of the jacket, completing a smart costume frock.

Moiseivitch has just returned to this country for another concert tour embracing all of the leading musical centers from New York to the Pacific coast.

Moiseivitch is very fod of America and Americans. In London, a few years ago, he brought to light two compositions by John Powell, the Virginia pianist. Doane College Notes

A two-piano concert by Mrs Jean Lindsay Carlson and Mrs. Bertha Smiley Cook of the music faculty of Doane college marked the chapel service Wednesday morning as a day to be remembered. A two piano arrangement of the very brilliant symphonic poem "Les Preludes," by Liszt, occupied the entire program and was received by the students with a storm of applause.

"Les Preludes," as Mrs. Carlson explained at the opening of the concert, is an interpretation in music of the poem by Alphonse Lamartine having the same title. The thought of the poem is summed up in the lines "What is life but a series of preludes to that unknown song whose first solemn note is tolled by death?" The intricate series of movements, flowing into one another, which present this thought were brilliantly performed by the two pianists.

A "health code for college women", amounting really to a statement of student standards, was adopted Tuesday morning in the Y. W. C. A. meeting. The code had been worked out by the cabinet of the student Y. W. C. A. and on being submitted to the student body was discussed and amended from the floor.

At the close of the meeting, a hand-illuminated copy of a prayer for health used by Dr. Eva Blake in the meetings she has been conducting, was presented to each girl as a gift from three women faculty members, Miss Myrtle LeCompte, Miss Julia Hawkes, Miss Alice Bowlus. The givers had prepared and illuminated each copy themselves. The prayer is one which had made a deep impression upon the girls.

"Uncle Jimmy", a one-act play of village life by Zona Gale, was presented by a number of the Doane players at their weekly meeting Monday night and was cordially received by the players and by many guests who were present.

The Doane players announce that their next public play will be "Stop Thief!" instead of "It Pays to Advertise" as announced last week. The change in plan is due to the discovery that the latter play had been performed several times in Crete by other organizations. The performance will be just before the Christmas holidays.

The Doane college chorus of 100 voices will present the oratorio "The Holy City," by Gaul, on Sunday, December 10 at 3 p. m. in Lee memorial chapel. The chorus includes both students and people of the town and is directed by Prof. Charles V. Kettering, head of the Doane college conservatory.

Preparations are being made to enlarge the seating capacity of the auditorium on this occasion by putting seats in the two large side rooms of the chapel.

The Modern Languages club of Doane was entertained Wednesday night with reminiscences of "Student Life in France and Spain," by Miss Marian Capps and Miss Luella Carter of the modern languages faculty.

"Social Life of the Insects" was the topic taken up in two papers by Miss Elva Bloodgood and Miss Joy Hoffhine at the meeting of Beta Lambda Sigma, biological society, Wednesday night.

Dr. Eva Blake spoke Wednesday before the Fortnightly club of Crete at the home of Mrs. H. H. Johnston on "The Psychology of Color." She addressed the high school girls of Crete on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Schwartz of Loomis, were the guests of their daughter orothy, at Gaylord hall last Friday evening.

Miss Luella Carter spent Saturday and Sunday of last week in Hastings, where she was formerly dean of women at Hastings college and still has many friends.

MIDLAND COLLEGE.

Rev. Fred Young of the Baptist church gave a short talk in behalf of the Red Cross to the student body in chapel Thursday morning, November 16.

Midland college held her Homecoming this year Friday, November 17, in connection with the Kearney-Midland game. Many of the former Midlander and former Pioneaters, as well as friends of the college were back for the day. The Pep chapel in the morning, the parade the game which was a victory for Midland of 13-6, and the big banquet in the evening at the Parkhurst hotel where 225 Midlanders were present, were full of enthusiasm, and in spite of the gloomy weather it was one of the greatest Homecomings Midland has ever had.

Prof. R. E. Albright, director of the School of Commerce, will preach in Grace Lutheran church Lincoln, Nebraska, Sunday, November 26.

The Faculty Women's club were entertained at the home of Mrs Kate Gilbert, Saturday afternoon, November 18. The hostesses were Mrs. Gilbert, Miss Kies, Mrs. Albright and Mrs. Hawkinson.

Miss Mildred Bozza, a student in the University Medical school, Omaha, visited the college Wednesday, November 22, in the interest of the Student Volunteers.

The Warriors play their next to the last game of the season with Nebraska Central college on Thursday afternoon, November 23, at Central City. It is hoped that the boys will play hard for one or two of the team will not be able to play because of injuries during the Kearney game.

The girls of the East Hall Missionary society are making great preparations for money making at the Fun-Fair which they will give Friday evening November 24, in the main building at the college. It will be a real fun-fair with everything from the great roller-coaster way, and the Japanese tea garden, to the fortune tellers and the pie-a-la-mode booth.

Wesleyan Affairs

Leland Albertson addressed the botanical club Wednesday afternoon on the subject, "Effects of transpiration on absorption of salts."

The November "Alumnus" came fro press this week. Miss Ethel M. Langdon is the editor of this year's publications of this magazine. The cover carries an ornamental design which was drawn for the purpose by Dorothy La Selle. The issue contains much alumni and faculty news. A leading feature is the chancellor's annual address which is given in full. Personal sketches are given of Stanley High who is son of C. A. High of University Place, and John W. Crist. S. H. High is the author of "China's Place in the Sun." Since his graduation from Wesleyan in 1917, Mr High has had much opportunity in personal travel in Asia and Europe to study the eastern problems.

Mr. Crist is a member of the faculty at the University of Nebraska where he is continuing research begun at Nebraska Wesleyan in biological lines.

The "Alumnus" also contains letters from Pearl B. Fosnot of Cawnpore, India; Ethel L. Whiting, India, the latter describes a trip she made in the summer to southern india.

E. L. Allen director of the conservatory of music in Mount Union college at Alliance, Ohio has written the authorities at Nebraska Wesleyan asking about rules for accrediting music in a regular liberal arts college. That institution has received a large endowment gift towards its music department and desires to standardize its courses in music.

Elvin Bauman who has been for several years a student at Nebraska Wesleyan expects to attend Washburn college to pursue some special work during the winter.

Lucile Elenore Butz was the smallest baby on the floor at the auditorium Wednesday evening but she took third prize among twenty-four baby girls. She is the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Butz, jr., 924 South Eighth street.

Chadron Normal

The spirit of a college student body has never been displayed in a more typical manner than it was displayed at the annual Y. W. banquet, Friday evening in the gym. The room was attractively decorated with autumn leaves and potted plants. Every class was equally wide awake and contributed its songs and yells, most of which were composed for the occasion. After delicious feast and merriment the toastmaster, Doris Smith, introduced the after dinner speakers of the harvest festival. The subjects of the toasts were as follows: "Tilling," "Sowing," "Reaping," "Threshing" and "Storing."

Miss McCallum's swimming class is becoming quite proficient in the aquatic sport. All members of the class are now able to dive from the side and one or two dive from the board.

Friday afternoon November 17, the annual clash of the Rapid City Miners and the Chadron Eagles occurred. The contest was everything that could be desired of a football game. Punting duels, forward passes, line-bucking, and open field running all added spice to the combat. Captain McKelvey's educated toe was the deciding factor of the game, the score being 9 to 0, in favor of the Eagles. The Eagle machine would batter and smash its way within striking distance when "Mac" would coolly boot the pigskin over. Although the men from Rapid City displayed a brilliant sort of line smashing attack, they were beaten at their own game by an eleven of less beef but possessed of a superior fighting spirit.

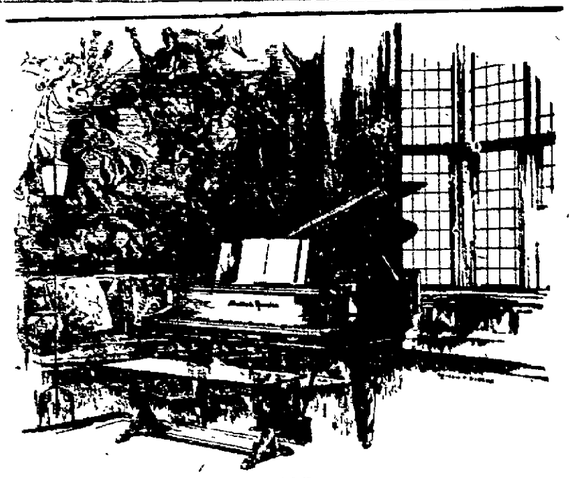

L. J. F. Jaeger known in pioneer times as "Billy the Bear" imparted some most interesting and useful information in an address to the class in western development on Monday afternoon of last week. Mr. Jaeger spoke on an epoch in the development of the west of which there is no accurate history written. The day of the Texas Cattle trail.

The freshman college class has selected a fine cast for its play "Clarence" by Booth Tarkington, which will be staged this semester.

The class in story telling is doing fine work this semester in their story hour at the city library and at practice periods in the model school.

The first of the Midland lyceum entertainers the "Alcazar Quintet" was given at the Normal chapel Saturday evening. Although there was a small audience everyone went away feeling that it had been very entertaining and quite worth while.

THE
PIANOFORTE
There is a subtle satisfaction in knowing that one's possessions, whatever their nature are of superlative excellence. A Gobelin tapestry or a da Vinci painting is a constant source of pleasure and bears testimony to the taste of its owner. To the music lover the same is true of the possession of a Mason & Hamlin Piano.
Those who are musically sensitive, whose appreciation of tonal quality renders them competent to judge, pronounce the Mason & Hamlin Piano the leading instrument of its kind.
Dame Melba richly endowed with musical discrimination says in this connection "It seems to me that the preference on the part of an individual for the Mason & Hamlin Piano is indicative of a superior musical nature."
Only an actual hearing can give a realization of its beauty of tone.
We invite a hearing.

The THEATERS

"CREOLE FASHION PLATE" IS KARYL NORMAN.

"The Creole Fashion Plate" drove the ball of success over the fence for a home run in Keith vaudeville last season, having previously scored a triple expansion hit over the Orpheum circuit a year previous, and when New York was reached this season simply set the metropolis agog. Indeed, wherever, "The Creole Fashion Plate" has appeared, the query "Who is 'The Creole Fashion Plate?'" has become the subject of general controversy

There has been, perhaps, more speculation upon the identity of this magnificently gowned artist than has concerned any other performer of the theatres of America in recent days. It has, therefore, been decided to set the inquiry at rest by divulging the fact that this animated fashion plate's name is Karyl Norman. Hereafter Karyl Norman and "The Creole Fashion Plate" will be coupled together each identifying the other.

When they are heard at the Orpheum theatre next week, dual personalities will be strikingly exemplified, for as "The Creole Fashion Plate" this artist will sing in a beautiful clear, resonant and sustained soprano voice, and as Karyl Norman will render popular songs in robust baritone. As "The Creole Fashion Plate," the entertainer will wear frocks of ultra-modish design, and as Karyl Norman, the conventional tuxedo or dinner dress of a young college man, if not the overall attire of "Huckleberry Finn."

KIBBIE'S "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" COMPANY.

That old, old story so new to present day theatre goers, "Slavery Days," will be realistically presented by Kibble's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company in the Orpheum, for two days, with daily matinees, commencing Monday November 27.

A drama to be successful must not only appeal to the older heads down stairs but must have a vital interest for the lad who occupies the gallery bench. All ages must be appealed to with something that amuses and instructs; something that will touch the better nature of the heart. All this and more the drama "Uncle Tom's Cabin does. That this famous classic of the American stage still retains its popularity may be explained in two ways. Firstly it is the stage version of a book that did much to hasten the freedom of slaves, and, secondly, the public long ago learned that the Kibble organization gives, not only a perfectly correct picture of Harriet Beecher Stowe's immortal work, but with each return visit of the attraction he presents all that is newest and best in high class and refined vaudeville.

In this offering the management positively guarantees the patrons that the performance will be the very best, fully equipped with special scenery, mechanical and electrical effects. The organization includes, in addition to a strong acting cast, a troup of jubilee singers, plantation dancers and musicians. Everything is new, bright and right up to the minute and the company is bigger and stronger than ever before.

SPLENDID THANKSGIVING PROGRAM AT THE LYRIC, LIBERTY, RIALTO AND COLONIAL THIS WEEK.

The feature attraction at Rialto is Mack Sennett's big super production, "The Crossroads of New York" a six-reel comedy melodrama with twelve real stars in the cast and hundreds of Broadway beauties. A tale of the way of a country lad with three city ladies. A drama replete with laughter and thrills, that made New York itself sit up. An exceptional array of interesting and entertaining short subjects and the added attraction "Ye Olde Puritan Singers" A fine interpretative musical program will be rendered by Conductor Jean L. Schaefer and his symphony players, Wilber R. Chenoweth, organist.

The feature attraction at the Lyric is Guy Bates Post, one of America's most distinguished actors in "The Masquerader," a real screen masterpiece, a drama of splendid suspense, romance and thrills, which the critics praised even higher than the stage play; short subjects of interest that will be enjoyed by all. Extra added attraction, "The Crinoline Girls." A musical program of unusual excellence will be rendered by the Lyric concert orchestra, Joseph Black, director and the Marjorie Little trio.

At the Colonial, Harry Carey will be seen in a drama of love and adventure, entitled "Man to Man," in which you will see the wild, fire-driven stampede of thousands of the maddened steers; the thrilling hand-to-hand fights between the men of the plains; and the terrific climax, in which a man and a girl face a dozen armed villains, in a mountain duel in which the odds were hopelessly uneven. Al. St. John in his newest comedy, "City Chaps" a comedy that fairly bubbles with roars of laughter and Kinograms of interest. Music by J. C. Norman Richards and Herbert C. McAban, organists.

At the Liberty the first half of the week, the bill will include the Pantheon Singers, a quintette of real vocalists; his honor, Dave Manley, a vaudeville favorite, known as the mayor of the U. S. A., the Moran Sisters, pretty and attractive steppers, in a modern miniature dancing novelty, assisted by Norman Carp, Frank Seymour and Jack Healey, eccentric comedy entertainers; Joe and Frank Hardy, in a vaudeville oddity, sprinkled with laughs; "Splitting Hairs," a new and most amusing Sunshine comedy; Ruth Roland in "The Timber Queen, and the International News Weekly. Music by Babich and his prize orchestra. Coming Thursday, Thanksgiving day, J. Burke Morgan, Deforest Wolley, Mary Stockwell and company in a joyfest of merriment. "Oh My Goodness," Oscar Patrowar and company Russia's premier athletes in the most gorgeous act in vaudeville, three other comedy offerings of quality, comedy and news pitcures and "In the Days of Buffalo Bill." At all holiday matinees, night prices will be charged.

Screen Siftings

Seventy-two photographs most of them stipple prints from original negatives by Kales or Warrington, adorn the lobby of the Lyric theatre, New York, where Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" is being shown. The photographs all pertain to the production.

Charles de Roche, the French cinema star, has signed a contract with Famous Players-Lasky, and will play the title role in "The Spanish Cavalier," after he completes his work with Dorothy Dalton in "The Law of the Lawless" "The Spanish Cavalier" was originally chosen as a picture for Rodolph Valentino.

Houdini at one time posed as a professional medium in order to learn just how some of the mediums worked to obtain their materializations. He is now working on a book on Spiritualism in which he exposes "fraud" mediums' methods. Houdini is also road-showing his picture, "The Man From Beyond."

Frank Lloyd, who will direct Norma Talmadge in "Within the Law," expects to go to New York in time to meet the Talmadge party on their return from Europe. The first "shots" for "Within the Law" will be filmed at the Tombs and at Auburn prison. The rest of the production will be made at the United Studios in the west.

Madge Bellamy has been engaged to play a leading role in Katherine MacDonald's new picture, "The Scarlet Lily," which Victor Schertzinger is directing. Miss Bellamy is the star of Tourneur's "Lorna Doone" which has just been released. Other members of the "The Scarlet Lily" cast are Lloyd Hughes, Hardee Kirkland, Tom Santschi, and Myrtle Vane.

Charlies, the monkey, whose last screen appearance was with Harold Lloyd in his next release, "Dr. Jack," has been chosen to support May McAvoy in a new Ince production in which she is being featured, made under the direction of John Griffith Wray Charlie was chosen from a multitude of monkeys who applied the polite way he tipped his hat to her every time he saw her.

"The Easiest Way," has been chosen for Theda Bara's "come-back" under the Selznick banner. This is the stage play by Eugene Walters in which Frances Starr played on the legitimate stage.

"Salome," Nazimova's last photoplay which has been in "cold storage" for sometime, is to be released the first of the New Year. Mitchell Lewis plays the role of Herod in the picture ,and Nigel De Bruler is Jokanaan.

"Luck" is the temporary title of Johnny Hines' next fetature comedy drama. Violet Mersereau plays the leading role opposite Mr. Hines, and Charlie Murray, Flora Finch, Polly Moran, Robert Eison and Edmund Bresse are members of the supporting cast.

Winston Miller, twelve year old brother of Patsy Ruth Miller, has been engaged for a part in "The Power of a Lie," a new Goldwyn picture. It will be Winston's first screen appearance.

The mink coat worn by Claire Windsor in "Brothers, Under the Skin," was insured by Goldwyn for $10,000.

John Gilbert has signed a new contract with Fox Film corporation, to star in a series of productions for that company His first will be an adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's "Truxton King."

The title of Tom Mix's next picture, which was originally called "Shoe-Bar Station," has been changed to "Catch My Smoke."

Marjorie Daw and Johnny Harron, who have been vigorously denying any matrimonial intentions in the past, have finally come forward with an announcement of their engagement. It is expected the wedding will take place in the spring.

Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan, who are at present playing together in 'The Beautiful and Damned," a Warner Brothers production are said to have announced their engagement. Mr. Harlan's first wife secured a divorce from him about a year ago, charging cruelty.

Laurette Taylor will wear the same dresses, hats and shoes, in her screen version of "Peg O'My Heart" that she is making for Metro, that she wore ten years ago when she first appeared in the stage play in Los Angeles.

Among the stage and screen celebrities who appear in the first all color photoplay, "The Glorious Adventure," for release by Allied Producers and distributers are Lady Diana Manners, England's professional beauty; Hon. Lois Sturt, daughter of Lady Allington; Miss Alice Crawford, tragedienne; Flora Le Breton, a musical comedy star, and leading lady for Georges Carpentier in his next picture; Elizabeth Beerbohm, niece of Sir. Herbert Beerborm Tree; and Marjorie Day.

Patsy Ruth Miller is to be Charles Ray's leading lady in "The Girl I Loved," an adaptation of James Whitcomb Riley's poem.

"The Man Who Played God," the next George Arliss release, is heralded as a "film without a villian." Edward Earle is the nearest approach there is to be a villian in the picture, as the third in a domestic triangle, but he happens to be a really respeceable interloper. The plot of the play is the struggle of the hero's better and baser selves, sort of a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," as it were.

Edmund Lowe has gone to Honolulu where the scenes of "The White Flower," are being filmed, to play the leading role opposite Betty Compson in the production. The picture is being filmed under the direction of the author, Mrs. Julia Crawford Ivers, who spent many months living in the islands and around the scenes of the story while she was writing it. Some of the scenes are laid at the brink of the volcano, Kilauea.

Edward Phillips has been engaged for a leading part in "The Ninth Commandment," a picturization of Fannie Hurst's story of the same name which Frank Borzage, of Humoresque" fame, is doing for Cosmopolitan. Phillips appeared in the role of Joe Ullman in "Just Around the Corner," and has also appeared on the screen with such stars as Mary Pickford and Alice Joyce.

The men seem to have the best of it in "Ben Hur." Out of twenty parts in the stage cast, fifteen fall to the men and only five to the women. Of course, in the screen version of the picture, which is being prepared by June Matuis, there may be some changes, Goldwyn will produce the picture.

Alma Bennett, an eighteen year old brunette, who has been playing bits for the past two years, has been given a contract with Goldwyn, and now will play regular parts.

John Bowers has the role of John Fidd, while Madge Bellamy is seen as Lorna Doone. In the screen version of the great novel, which is now ready for release by First National Maurice Tourneur the director who is responsible for "The Bluebird" and "Treasure Island" had charge of the meaphone during the filming of "Lorna Doone."

"Poor Men's Wives" soon to go into production at the B. P. Schulberg studios at Los Angeles, is the result the studio, requesting a sequel to "Rich Men's Wives." The story is written by Frank Dazey and his wife Agnes Johnstone, who are also responsible for the first story. A new cast of players will be chosen for the sequel, because Claire Windsor, together with the rest of the cast of Rich Men's Wives," would not fit into the role of a "poor man's wife."

Leah Baird's latest production has been titled "When Civilization Failed." Prominent in the supporting cast of the picture are Tom Santschi, also B. Francis, Richard Tucker, Walter McGrail and Bobby Bolder.

COMBINE THREE COMEDIES IN ONE

"Sally, Irene and Mary" Are Joined By Shuberts to Make New Production.

Latest From Broadway Features Elaborate Staging and Capable Cast.

NEW YORK, Nov 25. — Mary O'Brien, Sally Clancy and Irene all lived on Avenue A, on the East Side There lived also Jimmie Dugan, the boss of the neighborhood A theatrical manager, strolling through the streets saw the three girls and their companions dancing to the music from a street piano Whereupon Sally, Irene and Mary were engaged to go upon the stage, and created the hits known to all New Yorkers.

This starts the new musical comedy hit produced by the Shuberts at the Casino Theatre Eddie Dowling, who plays the role of Jimmie Dugan, and Cyrus Wood are the authors of the book Raymond Klages is the composer of the music, J. Fred Coots is the author of the lyrics Allan K. Foster is responsible for the musical numbers, and the piece is staged by Frank Smithson. There are ten scenes in the two acts, the story carrying the characters from the East Side tenements to the theatrical district, the Park avenue outdoor fair and the Little Church Around the Corner.

Jimmie Dugan is in love with Mary and begs her not to leave the neighborhood. He loses track of her becomes a plumber and, with $1,800 in the bank, buys a Ford. His mother is his pal until he reads in the paper of Mary's success. Then he goes uptown to see her and offer her his heart But the differing conditions in life deter him until Mary has to propose to him herself Clarence Edwards not Jack Pickford, becomes the husband of Sally, while Irene is married to Percy Fitzgerald, a pal of Clarence.

Story of East Side.

The burden of the piece falls on the shoulders of Eddie Dowling, as Jimmie, and Edna Morn, as Mary. The story is told in the language of the children of the East Side, and threats of "a sock on the nose" are frequent. The humor of the play is infectious, and there are several moments of pathos

Edna Morn is charming as Mary O'Brien, later to be known as Mary Brown. Jean Brown is Sally Clancy and displays excellent ability as a toe dancer. Kitty Flynn is the Irene. Josie Intropidi, as Mrs Dugan, has a "fat" part and does much to keep the performance moving.

The Shuberts have provided elaborate staging and costuming and present an attractive chorus, with an octet of men singers, behind the large cast of principals. There is a dash to the production that pleased the first night's audience.

Among the songs are "Kid Days" "Time Will Tell," "Do You Remember," "Right Boy Comes Along," "Opportunity," and "Until You Say Yes."

University Notes

All University church Sunday, November 26, will close the organized drive of Lincoln churches to get university students to affiliate with the churches of their choice. This affiliation did not in any way affect their membership in other congregations, but gave the student an opportunity to be a member of the church he desires to attend without transferring his membership.

The idea of all-university church Sunday originated in the war days with the go-to-church movement. But lately it has become more like all-university church night (a closed night for the university) when Lincoln churches provide entertainment for the students Chancellor Samuel Avery, in inviting the students to observe the special day; said:

"This invitation, which goes out to all the university students, has my hearty approval I shall be greatly pleased if the movement results in a marked increase in attendance at all the Lincoln churches This is one of the fine customs which has become an all-university" tradition and every student is urged to observe it."

Custom has fixed this day as the first before Thanksgiving. This came about when students went home for the holiday, and it remains even though students remain in the city for their Thanksgiving this year.

Nine hundred thirty-six persons were enrolled for courses by correspondence offered by the university extension division from November 1921 to November 1922 This does not include the 700 who are taking extension work through the night classes at the university. Twelve hundred students have completed over 5,000 credit hours by extension since 1909 according to the University Extension News of November 15 One student has a record of fifty-two hours, one has thirty hours, five have twenty-five or more hours, and eleven have over ten hours.

Alumni of the University of Nebraska numbering almost 25,000 are being asked to contributed $100,000 toward the building of the faculty over $25,000 and the city of Lincoln oversubscribed its quota of $250,000 last week. The city of Omaha, including the alumni there, has been asked to pledge $60,000. Twelve university county alumni association had subscribed their quota by last Wednesday. These were Perkins, Red Willow, Phelps, Harlan, Logan, Clay, Sherman, Wayne, Cuming, Platte, Lancaster, and Johnson counties About forty other county chairmen have indicated that they will pledge the quota assigned them. R. E. Campbell, '10, of Miller and Paine's was chairman of the stadium drive in Lincoln which overtopped the $150,000 by several thousand dollars

In the course of lectures to the freshmen of the college of arts and sciences, Prof E H. Barbour, chairman of the department of geology and geography, was the speaker last week. His subject was "The Evolution of Man and Domestic Animals."

Preparations for "East is West," the next drama to be offered by the University Players are well under way The characters are to be presented by excellent talent, and the quaint, picturesque Chinese stage settings to be used offer an insight into Chinese life such as is seldom seen on the stage For these setting, the Players are indebtd to Lt. Colonel and Mrs W. A. McDaniel and to Dean and Mrs. Warren A. Seavey who are kindly lending their collections of Chinese furniture and bric-a-brac which they collected during their travels and residence in the Orient. The play, itself, is one of the season's greatest presentations. With a tinge of the comedy, a mysterious Oriental atmostphere, and a jolting, smashing climax it is expected to fulfill the highest expectations of play-lovers.

Two other members of the university faculty have already lectured before the academy this year. Prof. E H Wolcott, department of zoology, spoke October 3 on "The Fauna of Nebraska"; Prof R. E. Cochran, department of American history, spoke October 31 on "John Quincy Adams and the Monroe Doctrine" These lectures were illustrated. The following illustrated lectures by university professors are also announced by the Academy Prof L. E. Aylesworth, department of political science, on "Prehistoric Animals of the Great Plains' on December 12; and Prof. H. H. Waite, department of bacteriology, on "Disease Prevention, Past and Present," February 6.

"THE MASQUERADER."

John Chilcote, M. P.—Guy Bates Post.
John Loder—Guy Bates Post.
Brock—Edward M. Kimball.
Eve—Ruth Sinclair.
Fraide—Herbert Standing.
Lakely—Lawrence Butt.
Lady Astrupp—Marcia Manon.
Robbins—Barbara Tennant.
Blessington—Kenneth Gibson.

John Chilcote has reached the place where his mode of living has just about achieved his ruin. His conduct had long since alienated the affection of his wife, Eve, whom he had practically deserted for Lady Astrupp, whose ideas concerning life, and how to make it worth living, coincided more with his own. After a sensational failure to make a speech before parliament he ventured out into the London fog, and beneath a lamp post, collided with a man who was his own image.

This was John Loder, a struggling journalist, and distant kin of Chilcotes. Loder, who had witnessed the other's failure [illegible] him in no uncertain manner something that Chilcote would [illegible] of accepting in anything [illegible] his maudlin state, handed him his card and disappeared in the darkness.

The leaders and the members of Chilcote's political party called upon him the next day to complete his undoing, but Eve persuaded them to give the unfortunate man another chance. They agreed to give Chilcote a chance to deliver his speech the next day.

The next day came, and with it Chilcote's loss of nerve. He took a stimulant to brace himself up, and only succeeded in making himself worse.

Desperate, he found his way to Loder's rooms, suddenly wanting to be rid of the entanglements of life, wanting the chance to follow his own desires. He broached the idea of changing places to Loder, who immediately refused the request, but Chilcote convinced him that he owed it to his country and to himself. Finally, Chilcote left Loder's rooms but a new Chilcote, and the Loder left behind in the rooms was Loder in the life—but a suddenly degenerated Loder.

Michael took it all good naturedly, and went to live in a small boarding house. [illegible]

[illegible] shoes and also into his position as far as the stage beauty was concerned, and the first thing he knew he was paying for the appearance of the terrible production and also was involved in a breach of promise suit after his announcement that he was engaged to Miss Ruth Anthony.

Poor Michael, he didn't know which way to turn, and no matter what he did, he only made things worse for himself. Ruth and her father were both spirited away, and Wall street suffered at Anthony's disappearance.

Then, just as everything looked hopeless for Michael, the uncle walked in and saved the day.

Into the dive of Portugee Joe on the beach of Tiva-Tiva comes Steve Packard, son of the Arizona ranges, who has been for years a derelict on the South Sea islands. His clothing is torn, and he is bedraggled by the storm that is raging outside. Joe starts to throw him out, but Steve reaches into an inner pocket somewhere and brings to light a coin enough to buy one drink. As he goes up to the bar he notices a letter addressed to him stuck in a [illegible]. It is addressed to him in care of the United States consul, but there being no such person, these kinds of letters generally wound up at Portugee Joe's.

The letter tells Steve that his father has died, and has left ten thousand dollars in a letter in the care of Royce, because he distrusted his old grandfather, Hellfire Packard. Royce intimates that he, Steve, has been in jail, and urges him to come home, saying that he has paid his debt to society.

Steve smiles, but tears the letter up.

Meanwhile in the pavilion adjoining, a row has broken out between a European and his cast-off mistress, Pana. Steve gets to the door in time to see the man throw Pana to the ground. He interposes and a fight ensues which ends when the woman and Steve are both cast out in the storm.

He sees that the woman is really seriously hurt and he carries her back to the cabin where he learns that she has a child, a little girl, seven years of age. The woman dies soon afterwards, and asks Steve to see that her little girl is cared for.

Steve works his way back to civilization and respectability, and then his troubles begin in earnest.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor — Will you please tell me all you can about the following stars: Lila Lee, Wallace Reid, Katherine MacDonald, Nazimova, Douglas Fairbanks, and Mary Miles Minter. Of what nationality is Lila Lee? I certainly think she is sweet.

Will you give me the cast of characters in "Shame."

What are the next pictures, Pearl White, Dorothy Gish, Buck Jones, and Rodolph Valentino play in? I saw Buck Jones last night in "Pardon My Nerve" and thought it was fine.

Thanking you for your time, I am EDITH, A FAN, Humboldt, Neb.

Lila Lee was born in New York twenty years ago, and educated privately. She started her career in vaudeville when she was quite a child under the direction of Gus Edwards, who "discovered" her. She introduced the song "Look Out for Jimmy Valentine" for Mr. Edwards [illegible]

[illegible]

Katherine MacDonald was born [illegible] five feet eight inches tall and has blond hair and blue eyes.

Nazimova was born in Russian Crimea, on the shores of the Black Sea. When she was a child she learned to play the violin, but tiring of this she went to Odessa and took a dramatic course. She made her first stage appearance under Stanislawsky at the Artistic theatre, Moscow. She has played over 200 different parts. She came to America to appear in Russian Repertoire, but the company failed, and she stayed here. She has been in motion pictures for about seven years, and is now going back to the stage for a while. Her husband is Charles Bryant.

Douglas Fairbanks was born in Denver, Colo., and as a boy attended a military academy. Later he entered the Colorado School of Mines and Harvard university. He appeared in vaudeville for a while, and under the direction of William A. Brady in "The Pit." He co-starred with William Crane in "New Henrietta" and was featured in "A Gentleman from Mississippi." He is an all-round athlete, and has performed many feats of strength and endurance in his film work.

Mary Miles Minter has been before the public ever since she was a baby. She was born in Shreveport, La., and educated through private tutors. She made her debut with the late Nat Goodwin, and has appeared with the Frohmans, Robert Hilliard, Mrs. Fiske and Madame Bertha Kalish on the stage. She made her first screen appearance in "The Fairy and the Waif," produced by the Frohman Amusement Corporation, and is now a Lasky star. She's a blond, twenty years old.

The cast for "Shame" is: "William Fielding," John Gilbert; "David," Mickey Moore; "David at 10," Frank Lee; "Foo Chang," George Siegmann; "Li Chung," William V. Mong; "The Lotus Blossom," Anna May Wong; "The Weaver of Dreams," Rosemary Theby; "Winifred Wellington," Doris Pawn.

Pearl White's latest serial is "Plunder." Dorothy Gish is playing opposite Richard Barthelmess in "Fury." Buck Jones has started work on "The Footlight Ranger," and Rodolph Valentino's next release is "The Young Rajah."

Dear Editor—More questions to be answered, but then, if you wish to grow up [illegible] you are almost compelled to [illegible]. I have here a nice example of my selfishness.

Please tell me the names of the children who danced and played at the Lyric the time "The Bachelor Daddy" was here, when "Grandma's Boy" was here too. Also, who sang the one time "Blood and Sand" appeared.

I saw Owen Moore in his late picture and I would like to have the cast of "Love Is an Awful Thing" and "Way Down East."

I thought the prologue was cute and would like to know who the jesters were.

I have noticed that you give pictures away and I am sending a two cent stamp to try my luck. Hoping I have not tired you, I remain a most ardent movie and prologue fan. JIM.

The children who danced and played at the time "The Bachelor Daddy" was here were the small daughters of Joe Cohen, H. O. Hostetler and Elmer [illegible]. The girls who sang the week "Grandma's Boy" was here were, "Hazel Huckerman, Kathryn King, Louise Vallery, Nine Upton, Joy Miller and Pauline Rav. Mr. Schaefer sang at the "Blood and Sand" prologue.

The cast for "Love Is an Awful Thing" is "Anthony Churchill," Owen Moore; "Helen Griggs," Marjorie Daw; "Ruth Allen," Kathryn Berry; "Harold Wright," Arthur Hoyt; "Porter," Douglas Carter; "Mother," Charlotte Mineau; "Superintendent," Snitz Edwards; "Superintendent's Wife," Alice Howell.

The "Way Down East" cast is: "Anna Moore," Lillian Gish; "Her Mother," Mrs. David Landau; "Mrs. Tremont," Josephine Bernard; "Diana Tremont," Mrs. Morgan Belmont; "Her sister," Patricia Fruen; "The Eccentric Aunt," Florence Short; "Lennox Sanderson," Lowell Sherman; "Squire Bartlett," Burr McIntosh; "Mrs. Bartlett," Kate Bruce; "Martha Perkins," Viva Ogden; "Seth Holcomb," Porter Strong; "Reuben Whipple," George Neville; "Hi Holler," Edgar Nelson; "Kate Brewster," Mary Hay; "Professor Sterling," Creighton Hale; "Maria Poole," Emily Fitzroy.

I can't give you the names of the Six Jolly Jesters. They were not local talent.

Dear Movie Editor—I read your page every week and enjoy it very much; I would like to know the cast of "Experience." I know the names of the two stars that played, but would like the names of the rest. I heard the reading, and saw the show and enjoyed it very much. I think Richard Barthelmess did very well, don't you? What is Ruby De Remer's next picture? What are the color of hair and eyes, weight, height and if married and to whom of Richard Barthelmess, Margery Daw and Ruby De Remer?

What are Richard's and Marjorie's next pictures?

I hope I have not taken up too much room in your column. I remain, R. L. H., Mordland, Neb.

The "Experience" cast is: "Youth," Richard Barthelmess; "Experience," John Miltern; "Love," Marjorie Daw; "Ambition," E. J. Radcliffe; "Hope," Betty Carpenter; "Mother," Kate Bruce; "Pleasure," Lilyan Tashman; "Opportunity," R. Senior; "Chance," Joe Smiley; "Touch," Fred Hallett; "Despair," Jerry Lane; "Intoxication," Helen Kelly; "Good Nature," Jed Prouty; "Poverty," J. Furey; "Wealth," Charles Stevenson; "Beauty," Edna Wheaton; "Fashion," Yvonne Routon; "Sport," Ned Hay; "Excitement," Sybil Carmen; "Conceit," Robert Schable; "Temptation," Nita Naldi; "Work," Frank Evans; "Delusion," Frank McCormack; "Crime," L. R. Wolheim; "Vice," Mrs. J. M. Beatty; "Degradation," Mrs. Gallagher; "Frailty," Florence Flinn; "Makeshift," Mac Barnes; "Gloom," Leslie King.

I have no new announcement for Miss De Remer. She was born in Denver in 1894. She's five feet six inches tall, weighs 122, and has light hair and blue eyes.

Richard Barthelmess is completing "Fury." He has dark hair and eyes and is twenty-seven years old. He's five feet seven inches tall and weighs [illegible]. Mary Hay is Mrs. [illegible] Barthelmess. Marjorie Daw is [illegible]. She is five feet two and one-half inches tall and weighs 104. No [illegible] there. She has hazel eyes and brown hair, and is twenty years [illegible]. She is in the cast of "Revenge [illegible]."

Dear Movie Editor—Would you please publish the names of the songs the man sang at the Lyric the week that there were showing "Nice People."

Do you think I could get the songs on records? I liked the first song the better. NO NAME FAN.

The first song Mr. Jones sang the week "Nice People" was here, was called "Through the Night." You will not be able to get a record of that yet, but next month the record for "To-Morrow Will Be Brighter Than To-day" should be out. That was the other number rendered by Mr. Jones that week.

Dear Madam: I understand that Mary Pickford is having dolls in the image of herself manufactured to be on the market this Xmas, 1922. Is this correct, and can you send me the address of the sales manager of her doll business? Thanking you in advance, I am L. R. Y.

Mary did announce sometime ago that she was going into the "doll" business and would make replicas of her sweet self to gladden the hearts of the little girls at Christmas time, but I have had no further news on the subject, and evidently the dolls are not yet on the market. I made inquiry at several of the stores here whether they had seen or bought any of the Pickford dolls, but they have not yet been brought to notice of the Lincoln toy buyers. If you were further interested it would do no harm to write directly to Mary at her Hollywood studio.

Dear Movie Editor—I accept the rebuke because I deserved it. In Sunday's paper MRS. J. L. wrote of the stars losing prestige by appearing in person, and here I have been lamenting the fact that more of them couldn't "show" themselves.

I saw Myrtle Steadman several years ago, and thought her far prettier than on the screen.

I had never quite forgiven Frances X. Bushman for leaving his first wife for Beverly Bayne until I saw them in Lincoln, and right away I forgave them both. They excelled my wildest imagination.

It's a good thing we don't all feel like Mrs. J. L. or the movies would go on the "blink" after a few more stars came here. Everybody to their own opinion.

I saw the Castle style show and thought it dandy. The music was so catchy, and they promenaded [illegible] they were living models and not "like they would "fall on the wayside" like most fashion shows [illegible]. I am curious enough to want to know what other [illegible] the Lincoln winner got, besides a chance to purchase the [illegible]. Don't you care to tell?

I'd like to know something of the wild "hunting" I don't remember to have seen much of him in your department.

One of the Castle models was Audrey Munson Younger. An Audrey Munson posed for most of the statues at the San Francisco Exposition and I was wondering if this could be the same one with the other name added. Do you know, or is this out of your line?

Hoping I'm not writing too often. I remain. Yours truly, MEG.

Come as often as you wish, "Meg." It can't be "too" often.

There was a prize given to the Lincoln winner in the Castle show, but I can't tell you what it was, because I don't know. I was informed by the store that they "didn't care to publish" the information.

Audrey Munson Younger is evidently not the Audrey Munson, the artist's model. She wouldn't be so reticent about it, if she were. Audrey Munson, the artist's model, has made a picture, "laying bare her soul."

Irving Cummings played here last week in "The Eternal Flame" with Norma Talmadge, so I suppose you saw him. He doesn't come real often—that's no doubt the reason I don't get many questions concerning him. He was born in New York City, thirty-four years ago, and entered his professional career via the Davison Stock company when he was quite young. He played on the stage in "The Man of the Hour," "The Great Divide," and "In Search of a Sinner." He also played with Henry Miller and Lillian Russell on the legitimate stage. In 1910 he entered motion pictures and has played with such companies as World, Fox, Universal, Select, Metro, First National, Paramount, in fact most of them. He has dark hair and brown eyes, which you could tell immediately by seeing him on the screen. He's married, too.

Screen Siftings

James Kirkwood and Lila Lee will give their fans a real thrill in "Ebb Tide," George Melford's new picture, when they have a fight under water with an octopus.

'Tis said that Wesley Barry has been trying to eradicate some of the "beauty" marks from his face, all on account of a blonde member of his company, who doesn't like freckles. "Little Heroes of the Street" is Wesley's latest picture, distributed by the Warner Brothers.

Another new producing company has made its appearance in the motion picture field. It is headed by L. Lawrence Weber, a brother of the famous Joe and Bobby North, who will be remembered as a musical comedy star by some of the older theatre goers. "Notoriety" is the first production released by this company, and its a seven-reel picture based on the love of popularity of the modern girl. Members of the cast are Maurine Powers, Mary Alden, Rod La Rocque, Richard Travers, George Hackathorne, J. Barney Sherry, Mona Lisa, John Goldsworthy and Ida Waterman.

MINERVA'S MAIL

CHRISTIANITY NEEDED.

Dear Minerva: I believe one great cause behind the horrible breaking up of homes which is going on now days is the lack of Christianity in these homes. People have been growing away from the churches and the old-time Christian basis of a home for many years and now it looks like we are degenerating into a non-Christian nation. Children are not made to go to Sunday school or church. They are not taught of God in the schools and He is not worshipped in the home. So where are they to learn of Him?

I have a brother who is a lawyer and through him we hear the inside stories of many of the weeping women and unhappy men who go to him to be steered through the divorce courts. At the bottom of them all are found lack of ideals and principles, instability, irresponsibility, restlessness, an unanchored aimlessness in living. For all of this Christianity is the cure.

As a woman wrote in your Mail recently, every excuse conceivable is found for staying away from church. Sunday is used as a day for extra sleep, for picnicking, motoring, reading, visiting.

The home needs to be brought back under the dominion of Christianity. Marriage is a high and holy vocation and to get at the root of its present degeneracy we must teach our young people to regard it as such—INTERESTED IN SOCIAL SERVICE.

"Consider the Stars."

Dear Minerva: I am so blue and despondent today that I scarcely know what to do. It seems like just everything is going wrong with my life. Several of our friends have been asked to join nice dancing clubs this Fall and we have not been invited. We are both good dancers and love to dance and I cannot understand why we were left out. Last year a card club that I belonged to disabanded, and it has been re-organized again this fall with almost its same membership, leaving me out and a couple of the other girls.

Now I have no enemies that I know of; I don't know of any reason why I should have enemies. But is seems like we are not as popular as we should be. We have a nice home and a car and there is every reason why we should have a good time. My husband is content with the friends we have and says he cannot understand why I fret and worry. But I just can't understand it, that's all. And I would like to have everyone like us and want to be with us. Why is it some couples are so popular when they seem to have so little, while others are not popular? Sometimes I wonder if I am too retiring and do not push myself enough? Do you think you have to be bold and pushing in order to get ahead socially now days? Please advise me. FAY.

A. You are giving altogether too much importance to the trifling frivolities of life. It is nice to belong to social clubs and go to and give parties. But when these things so fill a woman's life that she spends her time in brooding and worrying over the circles she would like to enter and cannot, then she is making a momentous issue out of what should merely be relaxation and recreation. Many women make a game out of their social lives and as long as they are happy and enjoy it, I have no complaint to make. But when they make themselves miserable through their ambitions, it is time for them to make a right about face in their way of living.

It is too bad to mar your days with grieving over such little unimportant things. Get away from the little rut in which you are living and open your eyes to the glories about you.

Pray with Henry Van Dyke to his 'God of the Open Air":

"From the prison anxious thought that greed has builded,
From the fetters that envy wrought
and pride has gilded,
From the noise of the crowded ways
and the fierce confusion,
From the folly that wastes its days
in a world of illusion.
(Ah, but the life is lost that frets and languishes there.)
I would escape and be free in the joy of the open air.
By the breadth of the blue that shines o'er me,
By the length of the mountain-lines
that stretch before me,
By the height of the cloud that sails,
with rest in motion,
Oved the plains and the vales to the measureless ocean,
(Oh, how the sight of the greater things enlarge the eyes.)
Draw me away from myself to the peace of the hills and skies."

Have your friends to enjoy them, and for your husband's pleasure. Do not envy them their social gains. Seek the enthusiasms and hopes of youth through your reading, through the outdoor life, through seeking sport and pleasure for the sake of happiness.

It may be your narrowness of vision, your grasping for social gain rather than seeking friends for their own values, that makes you less popular than you would like to be. We all seek those who are real and big at heart rather than those whose vision of life is befogged and befuddled with little things.

Mental Diet Needed.

Dear Minerva: I have been married several years, have a nice home, lovely baby and my husband is a man in his way. But Minerva he is so cold and unsympathetic. When I get tired and nervous and sometimes just can't help crying he doesn't try to soothse me but just leaves the house or shows irritation. He seems to love the baby but he doesn't want to have much to do with her. He likes to play with her a few moments then wants her taken away. Then he gets so cranky sometimes too, and doesn't care how he hurts my feelings or what he says.

Everyone says I have the best husband ever. He is very generous and doesn't want me to work hard and wants me to have pretty clothes and good times. But in these little personal ways that no one but myself knows about he makes me most unhappy. Is there anything I can do to change him? I am far away from my own family, and I feel so lonely and blue so much of the time. HILDA.

A. You need a diet my dear, a strenuous, rigid one.

"But I only weigh 99 pounds," you say, "and I don't see why I should want to diet and I think you really have gone a bit dippy on the subject."

But restrain your impatience. It is a mental diet I refer to. Deny yourself the luxury of self pity and crying spells and "nerves," as the fat lady denies herself candy and whipped cream and Parker house rolls.

He isn't such a bad sort after all. There cannot be complete understanding and sympathy between two persons, no matter how dear and near they are to each other. There are always remote phases which cannot quite be touched and understood. Your husband's coldness, his instinct to run from you when you are nervous and wrought up, and his seeming to give no thought to how he hurts you when he is cranky, are characteristics of his which you do not favor or understand. But you cannot do much to change him. And it is better that you learn to accept these peculiarities of his with complacence and composure.

Meanwhile look to your own marks. Self pity is weakening, enervating, deteriorating. Do not indulge in it. When you have a nervous headache, and feel impelled to cry and perhaps an impulse to make a scene about something, control yourself and retire to a darkened room for complete relaxation. Learn not to make demands of your husband.

Eyes Opened to Faults.

Dear Minerva: I am a man of forty-five years of age and facing a serious problem. I am just a staid everyday business man, an old money-bags to my wife and daughters. I have made a pretty good pile of money and am still making it and find my chief pleasure in my business. I have led a peaceful life for the most part and have always loved my wife and thought my family a pretty fine bunch. My son is exceptionally satisfactory to me. I am just plain silly in my pride of him. It doesn't look like I would have a problem. But here of late I've been getting restless and discontented. What is worse I've taken to criticising my wife and my two daughters (to myself, of course) in a way that's really awful. I hadn't thought anything about it for years but all at once I realized that my wife isn't as attractive as she might be. She has grown fat, a soft, meaningless sort of fat. She doesn't seem to care. Her hair, which used to be her glory, is faded and is fixed slipshody. Her voice is shrill and complaining or else loud and shrieking when she is amused. She wastes words pretty bad, has too much to say about everything and everybody.

Now she is a mighty fine woman and I'm ashamed to have these thoughts about her. But what am I going to do about it? I love her, of course, but there isn't any thrill in looking at her. I don't love any other woman, but there are a whole lot of them I'd rather look at and talk to. I haven't any notion of being one of those good-for-nothing men who desert their faithful wives for attractive little know-nothings. But I declare I get their viewpoint.

Now there are plenty of women older than my wife a whole lot who get themselves up to look mighty good and I think she is just careless. How would it work if I suggested to her that she take more pains? I'll bet she would just get mad. But I'd like to know your opinion. H. B.

A. I wish I might whisper a few words in your wife's ear for you. Such women don't realize the competition which they have in cool, trim young stenographers with their youthful figures, smooth, smartly arranged hair, and becoming frocks. They just don't dare go slack for one moment, and loll in supposed ease and comfort in loose, unbecoming clothes, their hair slam-bang in any old way, and their figures growing dumpier and their minds denser from lack of action. Less women do it now days than in the old days, believe me. They diet and plan and work a bit to retain their good looks. And it certainly does pay.

You love your wife. Of course you do. So just campaign and plot to arouse her pride in herself. Start out by taking her on a smart winter vacation. You need the change yourself for that restless, discontented feeling. Go to good hotels, where women appear their best. See good shows, where the very flower of womanhood is found in blossom. Let her visit the big shops and tell her to buy some new clothes and make herself lovely. If that won't arouse her pride I don't know what would.

By all means suggest to her that she is becoming too stout. It may make her cross. But one hint will be enough unless she is mighty far gone in the bog of self satisfaction. And she will join the hordes of women who diet and exercise and be the gainer by it.

Admires Her Principles.

Dear Minerva: I wish to commend the principles of Puzzled, who gave up her boy friend because he used cigarettes. Would that we had more girls like her, and fewer of the kind who are willing to abandon their principles for the sake of popularity. President David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford university, after many years experience says: "Boys who smoke cigarettes are like wormy apples—they drop long before harvest time. They rarely make anything but failures in after life. The boy who begins smoking before his fifteenth year will never enter the life of the world. When other boys are taking hold of the world's work, he is concerned with the sexton and the undertaker. When he begins to make it his business to fill the 725,000,000 air cells of his lungs with nicotine, carbon monoxide, and with other poisons in the cigarette smoke, it keeps him too busy to attend successfully to much of anything else. Making a chimney of his nose soon becomes his chief occupation."

Stick to your principles, Puzzled. You are right. It does hurt a man both morally and physically, and the man who isn't willing to admit it is the man whose brain cells have been weakened by its use. If the truth were told, possibly one-third of the young men who fall victims to tuberculosis do so as a result of the daily poisoning of the 725,000,000 air cells of their lungs with cigarette smoke.

The following item shows how very, very eager the tobacco interests are to win fresh victims to lay on the altar of "my lady nicotine" in order to fill their coffers:

The tobacco trappers are after the boys and girls in dead earnest. A big tobacco firm in New York sends a carton of two hundred cigarettes to youths as "birthday presents," accompanied by a friendly letter. The firm obtains the names, addresses and birthdays of younths in a community, and, shortly before the birthday, sends a letter, from which the following is an extract: "Tomorrow is your birthday, and all your friends will want to help you enjoy it. For out part we are sending you, under separate cover, a carton of ——— cigarettes. And we are not going to trouble you with a long letter telling you how good they are. Just smoke 'em! We hope they will win your friendship, and that you will agree with us that 'nothing else will do'."

It is said by one editor that the company does not send such birthday presents except to those who do not smoke, showing that it is a trap for the sole purpose of making smokers of boys. If anyone knows of a more devilish scheme to catch the boys for nicotine slavery, he should make it known to the public.

This is about on a par with a bit of "alcoholic evangelism" I read about several years ago, before John Barleycorn's activity became so greatly hindered.

At a meeting held in Columbus by the state liquor dealers of Ohio, one of the speakers had for his subject, "How to Build Up the Saloon," and among other things he said: "The success of our business depends largely upon the creation of appetite for drink. Men who drink liquor, like others, will die, and if there is no appetite created, our counters will be empty, as will also our coffers. Our children will go hungry, or we will be obliged to change our business to some other more remunerative. The open field for the creation of appetite is among the boys. After men are grown, and their habits formed, they rarely ever change in this regard. It will be needful, therefore, that missionary work be done among the boys, and I make this suggestion, that nickels expended in treats to the boys now will return in dollars to your till after the appetite is formed."

This is surely enough to set people to thinking, is it not? ARDENT.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion; if you are likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this. Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Company, 4512 Woodard Ave., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) one dollar. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets, (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription), one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat steadily and easily. Then continue the treatment until your weight is what you desire. Marmola Prescription Tablets are not only harmless but really beneficial to the general health. You don't need starvation diet or wearkening exercises. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully, and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.—Advertisement.

Nerve Force Is Life

All of the muscles of the body, all the organs of the body are stimulated and controlled by NERVES arising along the spinal cord, and issuing through openings between the vertebrae. If a vertebrae becomes misplaced, it produces pressure upon the nerve as it comes from the spinal cord through the opening formed by that vertebrae, and this pressure shuts off the VITAL NERVE FORCE controlling some organ or tissue of the body, producing a Diseased condition.

A spinal adjustment is the only thing that will relieve this pressure and restore health to the diseased part.
